THE POLITICS AND LAW OF DEMOCRATIC TRANSITION

CARETAKER GOVERNMENT IN BANGLADESH

SONIA ZAMAN KHAN

THE POLITICS AND LAW OF DEMOCRATIC TRANSITION

Peaceful legal and political ‘changing of the guards’ is taken for granted in developed democracies, but is not evident everywhere. As a relatively new democracy, marred by long periods of military rule, Bangladesh has been encountering serious problems because of a prevailing culture of mistrust, weak governance institutions, constant election manipulation and a peculiar socio-political history, which between 1990 and 2011 led to a unique form of transitional remedy in the form of an unelected neutral ‘caretaker government’ (CTG) during electoral transitions.

This book provides a contextual analysis of the CTG mechanism including its inception, operation, manipulation by the government of the day and abrupt demise. It queries whether this constitutional provision, even if presently abolished after overseeing four acceptable general elections, actually remains a crucial tool for safeguarding free and fair elections in Bangladesh. Given the backdrop of the culture of mistrust, the author examines whether holding national elections without a CTG, or an umpire of some kind, can settle the issue of credibility of a given government.

The book portrays that even the management of elections is a matter of applying pluralist approaches. Considering the historical legacy and contemporary political trajectory of Bangladesh, the cause of deep-rooted mistrust is examined to better understand the rationale for the requirement, emergence and workings of the CTG structure.

The book unveils that it is not only the lack of nation-building measures and governments’ wish to remain in power at any cost which lies behind the problems that Bangladesh faces today. Part of the problem is also the flawed logic of nation-building on the foundation of Western democratic norms which may be unsuitable in a South Asian cultural environment. Although democratic transitions, on the crutch of the CTG, have been useful in moments of crisis, its abolition creates the need for a new or revised transitional modality – perhaps akin to the CTG ethos – to oversee electoral governance, which will have to be renegotiated by the polity based on the people’s will.

This book provides a valuable resource for researchers and academics working in the area of constitutional law, democratic transition, legal pluralism and election law.

Sonia Zaman Khan, a PhD from the University of London, SOAS, is a Solicitor of the Supreme Court of England and Wales and an Advocate of the Supreme Court of Bangladesh. She has been a legal and social development consultant in London and Dhaka for many years. Her research interest lies particularly in governance.

‘The Politics and Law of Democratic Transition: Caretaker Government in Bangladesh offers a theoretically grounded, empirically rich, incisive discussion about a unique system of government in Bangladesh, and helps us to understand the challenges of governance and electoral systems in fragile democracies around the world. A must read for those interested in governance and democratization.’

Ali Riaz, Professor, Politics and Government, Illinois State University, USA

‘This incisive work lays bare the obstacles to “substantive” democracy gaining a foothold in Bangladesh. It is an essential read on the pitfalls of endemic friction between political hubris and popular will and opinion. The book’s prescription is for complacency to give way to foresight and innovation for a systemic leap forward.’

Justice Dr. Syed Refaat Ahmed, High Court Division, Supreme Court of Bangladesh

‘Sonia Zaman Khan brings into detailed focus a subject that has been pivotal in Bangladesh’s transition to democracy but has not been deliberated on to public satisfaction. This work happily fills that gap, for it explains the rationale behind the caretaker political system as a measure toward ensuring fair and free elections in Bangladesh. It enlightens readers.’

*Syed Badrul Ahsan, Bangladeshi journalist and author of
From Rebel to Founding Father: Sheikh Mujibur Rahman*

‘This is an insightful study of the transitional mechanism of caretaker government. It provides relevant facts regarding the liberation movement and its history. Current political realities are presented in the context of which conditions for free and fair elections are to be devised.’

*Dr. Kamal Hossain, Jurist, Politician and Chairman of the Bangladesh First Constitution
Drafting Committee, 1972*

THE POLITICS AND LAW OF DEMOCRATIC TRANSITION

Caretaker Government in Bangladesh

Sonia Zaman Khan

Routledge
Taylor & Francis Group
LONDON AND NEW YORK

First published 2018
by Routledge
2 Park Square, Milton Park, Abingdon, Oxon OX14 4RN and by Routledge
711 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017

Routledge is an imprint of the Taylor & Francis Group, an informa business

© 2018 Sonia Zaman Khan

The right of Sonia Zaman Khan to be identified as author of this work has been asserted by her in accordance with sections 77 and 78 of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reprinted or reproduced or utilised in any form or by any electronic, mechanical, or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, without permission in writing from the publishers.

Trademark notice: Product or corporate names may be trademarks or registered trademarks, and are used only for identification and explanation without intent to infringe.

British Library Cataloguing-in-Publication Data

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Names: Khan, Sonia Zaman, author.

Title: The politics and law of democratic transition: caretaker government in Bangladesh / Sonia Zaman Khan.

Description: Abingdon, Oxon; New York, NY: Routledge, 2018. |
Includes bibliographical references and index. | Based on author's thesis (doctoral - University of London, School of Oriental and African Studies, School of Law, 2014) issued under title: Democratic transition and the caretaker government in Bangladesh in a culture of mistrust, 2015.

Identifiers: LCCN 2017022362 | ISBN 9780415312301 (hardback) |
ISBN 9781351860253 (adobe reader) | ISBN 9781351860246
(epub) | ISBN 9781351860239 (mobipocket)

Subjects: LCSH: Cabinet system—Bangladesh. | Interim governments—
Bangladesh. | Bangladesh—Politics and government—1971

Classification: LCC KNG2260 .K48 2018 | DDC 342.5492/04—dc23
LC record available at <https://lcn.loc.gov/2017022362>

ISBN: 978-0-415-31230-1 (hbk)

ISBN: 978-1-315-22983-6 (ebk)

Typeset in Gaillard
by Deanta Global Publishing Services, Chennai, India

Dedicated to my loving father
Mr. Badiuzzaman Khan

The survival of our democracy and the unity and integrity of the nation depends upon the realisation that constitutional morality is no less essential than constitutional legality. Dharma (righteousness; sense of public duty or virtue) lives in the hearts of public men; when it dies there, no Constitution, no law, no amendment, can save it.

Nani Palkhivala, Privy Purse Case
(Madhav Rao Jivaji Rao Scindia v Union of India)
[(1971) 1 SCC 85]

CONTENTS

Foreword	viii
Preface	xii
Abbreviations	xiv
1 Introduction	1
2 Caretaker governance: A new dimension to politico-legal philosophy	11
3 Journey to democracy – the case of Bangladesh	67
4 The caretaker governments (CTG) in Bangladesh	116
5 Government transitions in Bangladesh: Critical contextual analysis of the CTG mechanisms, their performance and their assessment	155
6 The CTG as an intermediary strategy of responsible governance in Bangladesh and the uncertain kite journey ahead	199
Bibliography	221
Table of Cases	254
Index	255

FOREWORD

Democratic systems of governance with periodic elections are the dominant global norm in today's world. Yet even in leading Western jurisdictions, as recent outcomes in the United States, the British Brexit referendum and subsequent fresh elections indicate, manipulations of voting decisions and their consequences are not unknown. While such processes need to be constantly monitored, and no particular electoral system seems inherently perfect, politics remains everywhere a volatile, competitive balancing act, climaxing in periodic elections. Everywhere, often radically disparate aims and perspectives, with many agendas that may not be disclosed, vie for votes. While good election management would appear to involve constructive public engagement, akin to Habermasian conversations within the public sphere, these are manifestly far too romantic expectations. In many countries, not only in Asia and Africa, those in positions of power, or hoping to gain power, will be tempted to play games with people's ballots.

In normal democratic scenarios, voters periodically decide the fate of political parties and leader figures. Yet what if an electorate is manipulated or misguided so severely that a whole country and its political system is thrown into severe and prolonged turmoil? Few people may know that Bangladesh, one of the largest countries in the world in terms of population, has unfortunately suffered this kind of experience, facing what this important study calls 'an arrested democracy'. I am not suggesting here, nor does this book, that Bangladesh is the worst case imaginable of managing democratic elections freely, fairly and peacefully. However, deeply troublesome and serious deficiencies surround the ways in which Bangladesh has, since its blood-stained independence from Pakistan in 1971, dealt with its electoral processes. These troubles have motivated me, as a long-term student of Bangladeshi legal developments, and subsequently supervising the author of this study, as a more directly involved stakeholder, to engage in wide-ranging explorations of why and how the lofty visions of a bright future for a 'Golden Bangladesh' are constantly threatened by various manifestations of wanton violence. While such troubles can be related to the politics and law of democratic transitions, the core question remains of why this turbulence is so prolonged, so persistently brutal and so apparently unresolved. Worse still, dark storm clouds are on the horizon, as the next national elections are due in 2019. Presently, the Bangladesh Nationalist Party (BNP), as the main opposition, does not have a single member in parliament, since they decided to boycott the elections of 2014. This explosive scenario indicates that grave issues of self-righteous reasoning and petty petulance over claims to power cannot be defined away, but where are the solutions? A dysfunctional two-party system is only part of the trouble, while the lack of reliable election management structures and the deep-running culture of mistrust are pertinent, too.

Apart from prolonged periods of military rule, even when democratic elections were held at regular intervals, Bangladesh experienced much more than democratic teething problems. Bangladeshis are acutely political people and their country, the former East Pakistan, was created in a euphoric moment with high expectations of freedom and development, reacting against suppression by the postcolonial Pakistani regime. The shock of discovering very soon that not all Bangladeshis were the same, or shared the same vision, forms one major reason for the continuing electoral struggles in Bangladesh. None of the four major elements of the country's founding vision, nationalism, democracy, socialism and secularism are completely endorsed by all key stakeholders. As this book clearly shows, even the sophisticated Caretaker Government arrangements of Bangladesh, which worked quite well for about two decades, were more recently ruthlessly abused and manipulated, and then suddenly abolished in 2011. Presently, the country seems thrown back into serious turmoil, a troubling fact that news blackouts, restraints on open debate and desperate efforts to control law and order can barely cover up.

This book tells a realistic story, with some important lessons on the need to manage diversity and difference more skilfully, especially if one wants this populous Muslim majority state to avoid the troubles experienced by Afghanistan and Pakistan. What goes on in Bangladesh today is not widely enough known, but urgently needs to be known better, for this experience contains important lessons about how plural societies, in which Muslims are a demographic majority, may manage differences in a sustainable form. Such lessons would apply to Turkey and Indonesia, too, for example. Key questions go much further than asking which Muslims are the 'right' Muslims, as there will always be 'others'. The tragedy of Bangladesh is partly that the deeply politicised conflicts between Muslim secularists and non-secularists play out in a global scenario of ongoing confusion over what Islam actually is, as a religion and a way of life, and what it means, in specific conditions of time and space, to be Islamic. While that is not a topic to which this book aims to make a major contribution, such issues form a major element of the ongoing struggle of Bangladesh to manage difference and diversity through democratic processes. I have theorised this in terms of the somewhat romantic iccher ghuri, the wish-kite of Bangladesh, whose four key visionary elements of nationalism, democracy, socialism and secularism match the four corners of the theoretical model of the global kite of law. The dynamic kite image, with (1) natural laws, (2) socio-legal normativities, (3) state-centric laws and (4) international law and human rights principles, rather than depicting leakages in structures of good governance, simply illustrates that any attempt to cut out any of those four corners would lead to a crash scenario for the whole structure. Sadly, as political developments in Bangladesh abundantly confirm, good governance itself becomes a casualty if leader figures cannot even agree on the basics of governance, specifically in terms of whether being an elected ruler is a form of public service, an onerous duty or rather a passport to Austinian rights of domination and abuses of power, only thinly veiled by electoral endorsement.

Even today, the identity of Bangladesh as a separate nation remains challenged by those who push for some kind of imagined uniform Islamic structure and proclaim detestation of the multiple pluralities that underpin this nation. A uniformising vision, based on faulty understandings of law and Islamic jurisprudence, as well as all of history, society and politics, seems to clash over a deeply questionable vision of what it means to be Islamic in today's global, plural world. If Bangladesh, as a Muslim-dominated Asian country, wants to fly its own wish kite towards a golden future, how can some of its leaders behave as though this was an Islamic republic modelled on the very system from which it sought liberation in 1971? The country's vision of a golden future involves a certain kind of path, a form of shari'a – and I use that Islamic term deliberately here – that cannot avoid the challenging task of diversity management. All major stakeholders, including the political parties and their prominent leaders, actually know that Islam has a foundational pluralist principle of ikhtilaf, the tolerated diversity of human opinion. Islam's pluralist recognition of a diversity of approaches and opinions, also in relation to religion, should thus form the founding element of secularism in the iccher ghuri of Bangladesh for all stakeholders. It is clear to all that this means the acceptance of cultural and religious diversity within the context of an Islamic majority. In addition, as Bangladesh knows well, socialism does not feed people, and religion does not feed people either.

This spirited study, which involved much field research, too, is not focused on the impact of political Islam on the election troubles in Bangladesh. It shows, however, that the political struggles over the electoral arrangements in this country reflect a somewhat petty and deeply distrustful fundamental unwillingness to agree on anything, even on a common core of founding principles for this nation. As a result, the common people of Bangladesh are made to suffer and lose out, but the people remain also surprisingly confused, and thus carry a share of the blame for this arrested democracy. Since roughly half of the electorate seems somehow to favour either the BNP or the Awami League, all kinds of dramatic and devious interferences and interventions can easily swing electoral balances in a dangerously simple first-past-the-post system.

The richly documented analysis of this book generates some hope, though, that the people of Bangladesh themselves will learn to realise over time, and with more clarity, that the ballot box can give a sustainable answer for the better management of the country's internal diversity. Even if, as one currently observes, the minority populations are drastically decreased because of violence against non-Muslims and anyone who is perceived as ‘other’, the problem will never go away. A more mature democracy, freed from the dark powers that currently arrest it, and based on more respect for diversity among the citizens and voters of Bangladesh, is manifestly the only sustainable way forward. Maybe economic progress, which is clearly strongly in evidence in Bangladesh, will carry its own lessons about what kind of governance is better for the country as a whole. For achieving that realisation, the people of Bangladesh may not need a new caretaker arrangement, as the Election Commission is in place and there is no sensible reason why it should not perform its assigned duty, if allowed to work autonomously by the executive. But the people, as well as their rather too self-centred leaders, also need to cultivate a spirit of humanity that respects the deeper implications of democracy and of existing internal pluralities of the politics and law of democratic transition in Bangladesh. Fiddling with some institutions here and there, in light of the still present memory of the Caretaker Government scheme, may be only some drop of medicine that tackles certain peripheral aspects of the deep-rooted cancer of the selfish forms of extremist self-harm in Bangladesh. Only when the people of Bangladesh learn to use their voting powers more wisely will the country as a whole, and its glorious wish kite, be able to experience a real sense of freedom. This is not freedom from ‘religion’ and ‘culture’, as so much of Eurocentric argumentation still seeks to posit, but a conscious embracement of the various local manifestations of people’s connectedness with their religions and cultures, in a spirit of respect for a higher public interest and global peace, rather than terrorist self-righteousness running amok. That basic message, by the way, is also not irrelevant, as noted earlier, when so-called developed countries are engaged in democratic elections. A defective democracy may arise when leader figures are defective, lack a sense of public accountability or feign aims and ambitions that are clearly not in the public interest. It is an increasingly visible challenge, anywhere in the world, for the common voting public to look through such argumentative scheming and to cast their votes wisely.

Werner Menski
Emeritus Professor of South Asian Laws
SOAS, University of London

PREFACE

What prompted the undertaking of this work was to bring forth the inherent politico-legal difficulties Bangladesh had in managing its national elections. However, delving into the intertwining issues revealed complexities which are far more entrenched into the socio-cultural-religious milieu of the country than meets the eye. The book attempts to identify and disentangle these conflicting factors which weaken democracy – in whatever condition and if at all – it exists in Bangladesh today. Having said that, the initial journey of democracy in any nation is bound to have challenges and, to that extent, Bangladesh is no exception. If the concerned stakeholders are able to sift from this book the intricate issues which continue to remain as stumbling blocks to genuine electoral governance, my humble effort would be worthwhile.

The challenges faced in completing this project have been countless, including my stunted knowledge about the nation's political history and inherent societal dynamics; limited available academic resources on the transition of government in the context of South Asia, the Caretaker Government (CTG) in particular; and the abrupt demise of the CTG structure itself – all compounded with equally complex personal circumstances. Fortunately, I had the support of individuals whose graciousness in imparting their knowledge and experience saw me through this phase.

Although the book and its faults are mine, I know that its perspectives have been sharpened by able scholars, particularly Dr. Werner Menski, Emeritus Professor of South Asian Laws at SOAS, to whom I shall remain enormously indebted. The understanding of the subject has benefitted from constructive insights cordially offered by luminaries, such as the likes of former caretaker chief advisors and advisors, judges of the Supreme Court of Bangladesh, jurists, academics, lawyers, civil and military bureaucrats, civil society members and professionals, to whom I owe immense gratitude and who are Mr. Justice Habibur Rahman CJ, Mr. Justice Mostafa Kamal CJ, Mr. Justice Latifur Rahman CJ, Mr. Justice ABM Khairul Haque CJ, Mr. Justice Shamsuddin Chowdhury, Dr. Kamal Hossain, Barrister Amir-Ul Islam, Dr. Akbar Ali Khan, Dr. Wahiduddin Mahmud, Mr. Hafizuddin Khan, Mr. Abdul Mueyed Chowdhury, General Golam Quader

PREFACE

(retired), Dr. Hossain Zillur Rahman, Mr. Azizul Haque, Mr. Asafuddowlah, Mr. Muhammad Nurul Huda, Dr. M Zahir, Dr. Mizanur Rahman, Professor Shah Alam, Mr. Mahbube Alam, Mr. M I Farooqui, Barrister Manzoor Hasan OBE, Dr. Iftekhharuzzaman, Dr. Sumaiya Khair, Major General (retired) Syed Muhammad Ibrahim Bir Proteek, Major General (retired) Muniruzzaman, Lieutenant General Masud Uddin Chowdhury, Brigadier (retired) Sakhawat Hossain, Professor Khalilur Rahman, Dr Shah M Ali, and Dr Ahsanul Habib. The time they provided was invaluable, both in terms of the quality of information shared altruistically and in fortifying my knowledge and perception about the multiple tensions which play out between ideologies, power-politics, official and unofficial laws, abuses of systems, corruptions and socio-political mindsets.

I also wish to acknowledge with gratitude the kind assistance of Mr. Syed Badrul Ahsan, whose invaluable suggestions with regard to the historical narration of the region alleviated the gaps in the book. I would like to pay tribute to the calm professionalism of the entire team at Routledge, particularly the senior commissioning editor of Taylor & Francis Ms. Alison Kirk, the production editor of Taylor & Francis Mr. Adam Guppy, and the Deanta Project Manager Ms. Anna Snyder, who meticulously ensured that the book met the style and standard of the press. I thank my research assistant Mr. Musavee Reza and remain profoundly indebted to all the educational institutions I was ever part of.

A constant source of strength and encouragement are my parents, Mr. Badiuzzaman Khan and Dr. Dalia Nilufar, whose unconditional love, consistent support and unswerving prayers across the miles and at every step of my life are pure blessings. This project is as much a dream of theirs as of mine. I would also like to mention Mrs. Nora Shariff, my godmother who watches out for me from a different realm. My brother Shafquat Zaman Khan kept my spirits high from afar while my only child, Abrar Ahmed, despite his complex medical needs, endured my relentless preoccupations and erratic dispositions during this journey with such calm and poise, which often made me wonder as to who the real parent is. Last, but not the least, my heartfelt gratitude goes to my spouse, Barrister Muhammad Nawshad Zamir, for his abiding support in sustaining my intellectual pursuits.

Sonia Zaman Khan

ABBREVIATIONS

ACC	Anti-Corruption Commission
AD	Appellate Division
ADC	Appellate Division Cases
AI	Amnesty International
AL	Awami League
APSU	All Party Students Unity
ASK	Ain O Shalish Kendro
BCS	Bangladesh Civil Service
BDR	Bangladesh Rifles
BLAST	Bangladesh Legal Aid and Services Trust
BLD	Bangladesh Law Decisions
BLT	Bangladesh Law Times
BMA	Bangladesh Medical Association
BNP	Bangladesh Nationalist Party
BRAC	Bangladesh Rural Advancement Committee (Formerly)
C&AG	Comptroller & Auditor General
CA	Chief Advisor
CEC	Chief Election Commissioner
CEO	Chief Executive Officer
CJ	Chief Justice
CPD	Centre for Policy Dialogue
CSP	Civil Service of Pakistan
CTG	Caretaker Government
DGFI	Directorate General of Forces Intelligence
DLR	Dhaka Law Report
EC	Election Commission
EPO	Emergency Powers Ordinance
EPR	Emergency Power Rules
EU	European Union
FBCCI	Federation of Bangladesh Chambers of Commerce and Industry
FDD	Foundation for Defense of Democracies

ABBREVIATIONS

HC	High Court
HCD	High Court Division (of the Supreme Court of Bangladesh)
HRW	Human Rights Watch
HUJIB	Harkat-ul-Jihad al-Islami Bangladesh
ICT	International Crimes Tribunal Bangladesh
IDA	Islamic Democratic Alliance
IGS	Institute of Governance Studies
INC	Indian National Congress
ISIS	Islamic State of Iraq and Syria
JIB	Jamaat-e-Islami Bangladesh
JMB	Jama'atul Mujahideen Bangladesh
JP	Jatio Party
JSD	Jatio Shomajtantrik Dal
LDP	Liberal Democratic Party (Bangladesh)
MOU	Memorandum of Understanding
MP	Member of Parliament
NBR	National Board of Revenue
NDI	National Democratic Institute
NGO	Non-Governmental Organisation
PLD	Pakistan Legal Decisions
PM	Prime Minister
PO	President's Order
PPP	Pakistan People's Party
PPRC	Power and Participation Research Centre
PSC	Public Service Commission
RAB	Rapid Action Battalion
RPO	Representation of People Order
SAARC	South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation
SC	Supreme Court
SHUJAN	' shushashoner jonno nagorik ' (Citizens for Good Governance)
TAC	Truth and Accountability Commission
TIB	Transparency International Bangladesh
UK	United Kingdom
UN	United Nations
USA	United States of America
USAID	United States Agency for International Development

This page intentionally left blank

INTRODUCTION

The focus

Across the world, during election periods in general and government transitions in particular, tension, anxiety and fierce competition over the electorate's attention are commonplace and have become a well-known part of the struggles in managing the democratic process. Usually in democracies, a State's electoral system functions smoothly and along democratically acceptable ways to guide and monitor the processes of bringing about the next government. Unfortunately, this has not been the case in many nations, and particularly in Bangladesh, this has remained deeply problematic, even 45 years after independence from Pakistan in 1971. Despite its legacy in terms of inheriting presumably helpful institutions from the British Raj, the nation's historical development of arrested democracy has shaped its political landscape and its legal vicissitudes. In fact, these continuing troubles have not only influenced how Bangladeshi legal and political institutions have developed over the past few decades, but have also from time to time seriously endangered the future of the country as a whole. Even at the time of completing this book, holding acceptable free, fair and participatory elections in Bangladesh remains a burning issue, making this subject even more pertinent than it appeared at the beginning.

Amid this rather troublesome history of perennial failure to address existing problems of electoral governance in Bangladesh, a mechanism called 'caretaker government' (CTG) was devised, from 1990 onwards, to manage general elections and peaceful transitions of power. Since 1990, after ousting the prolonged military regimes, Bangladesh had entered a new phase of democracy in which the 'two' autocratically inclined battling 'Begums', as referred to in popular parlance, have given Bangladeshis no alternative but to choose between the two of them. And Bangladeshis had been content in exercising that choice in an atmosphere of free, fair and inclusive elections conducted through the CTG structure from 1990 to 2008. Given that political deadlock and violent conflict at the country's expense, between the two major political parties, the Awami League (AL) and the Bangladesh Nationalist Party (BNP), have characterised national elections since this new phase of democracy emerged, and given that the nation's democratic institutions have not been strengthened over the years, neither of these two parties believe that it would have a fair chance of winning an election organised by its rival because of the risks of relentless manipulation. This is why the unofficial CTG structure of 1990 formally emerged through a constitutional amendment in 1996. This rather unusual legal structure, created as a remedy by the political élite with the (assumed) will of the people (no referendum was conducted when the CTG emerged, nor when it was subsequently abolished), indicates a certain type of malfunctioning of the State machinery in a developing South Asian country at the critical point of elections. Neighbouring countries, while certainly not trouble-free, have not experienced the kind of intense problems to the extent witnessed in Bangladesh, which indicates that there must be specific factors that play out in creating these kinds of difficulties. Despite delivering four free, fair and participatory national elections over a period of 20 years, this constitutional innovation of the CTG is marred with controversy as to its benefit and effectiveness in assisting democratic transition, thereby fostering democracy in Bangladesh. Its abrupt abolishment in 2011 raised important new issues about the utility and efficacy of this mechanism. Clearly, the general elections of 5 January 2014 were conducted without any CTG, and promptly raised questions over democratic credibility, but to date, Bangladesh has a functioning government that, while of course not unchallenged, has managed to rule it, and rule it in a manner of nonchalance. Although 'on the world stage, Prime Minister Sheikh Hasina has joined a list of leaders who have been elected technically but without an electoral mandate' (Joehnke 2014), the AL government cannot be termed an illegal government, but one lacking serious democratic credibility since Khaleda Zia and her party, BNP, unwisely decided to boycott the poll on the grounds of the absence of a CTG to oversee a free, fair and inclusive election. This decision of non-participation, based on the belief that free and fair elections are not possible without CTG supervision, cost BNP their seats and their standing as an opposition voice in parliament – which is the democratic platform or centre stage. The ensuing violence which followed during the January 2014 election, together with the low turn-out of voters, leaving 154 uncontested seats in the hands of the ruling party, indicates that there is a difference between choosing two candidates rather than just one.

Against this backdrop of election-time tug of war and transition, which cripples the nation prior to general elections every time, the main question posed in this book is: To what extent is there any legal basis of, and justification for, the CTG as a supportive and effective vehicle for democratic transition in Bangladesh? Additionally, to what extent has the CTG mechanism been useful for Bangladesh, and what lessons have been learnt from its operation? To answer these main questions, the book explains and analyses in depth how the CTG machinery of Bangladesh arose and operated, how and why it was abolished and how it has been evaluated by various stakeholders, including the electorate. To capture public perceptions about the CTG and its functioning, a survey of a fairly large sample of people and interviews with stakeholders in Bangladesh regarding the CTG's utility and impact during government transition (if at all) was undertaken. The evidence yielded is integrated throughout the book, particularly in Chapters 4 and 5. While examining the extent to which the CTG is a workable instrument during the transition of power, given that its main role is to ensure that free, fair and participatory elections are regularly held, the book posits that perhaps this temporary institution itself may be a useful and constructive tool in terms of paving the way for good electoral governance in Bangladesh. The reactions to the abolition of the CTG in 2011 suggest that although such an institution may not be ideal in democracies, in the context of Bangladesh, it may still have some utility.

Nagging interrelated questions arise as to why Bangladeshi State election structures have been failing in this particular way, and what the reasons are for the failure of Bangladesh to adequately govern itself. In the troubled conditions of an emerging democracy like Bangladesh, where democratic institutions are not yet fully built, where the pendulum of power has swung between prolonged military rule and unstable civilian order, where there is clear evidence of deep mutual mistrust among most stakeholders and where there is a dysfunctional two-party system as far as holding free and fair elections are concerned, there appear to be many risks for operating an interim structure like the CTG. Despite these clear risks, including the risk of 'politicisation of the judiciary' (as involving the former chief justice as the head of the CTG ran the risk of blurring 'the separation between the judiciary and the executive') (Riaz 2013a: 3), there has nevertheless been a 20-year history of the CTG in Bangladesh. Thus, the book also questions whether the emergence of this structure itself constitutes evidence that the country's democratic system is not yet fully mature enough to handle the challenges of electoral transitions without the crutches of a neutral interim government of some kind.

Given the unscrupulous manipulation of the CTG mechanism from 2006 to 2008, a few subsidiary questions also arise as to whether and to what extent abuses of the system actually continue to pose risks to the country's progression to a satisfactory functioning of electoral governance. Looking at it from a completely different perspective, the book also attempts to examine how a jurisdiction like Bangladesh, in all its cultural specificity and variety, is able to absorb the ethos of a democratic culture when the notion of democracy actually emanates from a Western context and, to that effect, to what extent direct transplants of democratic models from the West actually function satisfactorily in the context of South Asia, specifically in Bangladesh.

The country's electoral history, post 1990, portrays a constant struggle between two deeply opposed political camps, AL and BNP, which have alternated in leading the country when elections were conducted by the CTG mechanism. It would be too simple to explain the electoral and governance troubles of Bangladesh as merely a consequence of this adversarial, vengeful and unremitting battle of AL and BNP, hence the other related questions arise which refuse to fade away: Is it a deeper systemic problem, and to some extent a question of culture, or is it really, as has been suggested, just a personal matter related to the so-called ‘battle of the Begums’ and thus some form of dynastic warfare? These important questions, elaborating also the wider political context, all relate closely to the main challenge of assessing the operation of the CTG as a legal tool of good governance in Bangladesh.

As the nation witnessed a controversial election, without the crutches of a CTG, in January 2014, in the process it once again succumbed to a series of deadlocks. The lack of desperately needed discourses between the government and the opposition regarding election modalities, the failed attempts of civil society members and the international community to bring AL and BNP members to a dialogue regarding election-time modalities, the boycott of election by the opposition, the ensuing anarchical street violence and crippling hartals (labour strikes) by the opposition, the phenomenal number of casualties resulting from the hartals and blockades, the ruthless crackdown on the opposition, the poor voter turn-out on election day, the government’s winning of large numbers of uncontested seats – all of these tell us about the effects of the manipulation of the law as a tool of governance in a South Asian country like Bangladesh. This results in a series of electoral governance malfunctions, which the populace is compelled to bear year in and year out.

Although the myriad complexities of transitional polities are a work in progress for any nation transiting to democracy, from a vantage point in early 2017, one of the lessons learnt from the CTG experience is, perhaps, that even a CTG can be abused and manipulated. But despite the pitfalls, over a period of 20 years, the fact of the matter remains that the CTGs have delivered free, fair and inclusive elections to Bangladesh over and over again, making the transition from one government to another as trouble-free and non-controversial as possible. Perhaps lessons have been learnt through the CTG experience, but evidently not enough, and it seems that throwing away these crutches of election management completely without creating a reliable alternative may have been a too rushed and somewhat reckless decision.

The context

Bangladesh started out in 1971 as a democracy, based on the legacies of its historical connection with India and Pakistan, but soon saw a regression into an autocratic form of governance. The ruling party, in its attempt to consolidate power, faced with infrastructural challenges, devastating famine, extreme economic hardship, severe deterioration in law and order, rampant corruption and, as a result, decreased popular appeal in the aftermath of a violent war of independence with the Pakistani army, which killed at least three million people ‘and sent ten million refugees fleeing to India’ (Bass 2014), decided to revert to a one-party system, following the communist parties of China and Russia. This socialist experiment was short-lived and was stopped in its tracks, as a military regime usurped power within a few months of these developments becoming evident, brutally assassinating the founding father of the nation, Sheikh Mujibur Rahman (revered as Bangabandhu – ‘friend of Bengal’) and most of his family members in 1975. Thereafter, the process of going back to a multiparty democratic system started anew, only to be halted again a few years later by fresh military interventions. These military interventions brought religion to the political forefront in a calculative manner, altering the political landscape of Bangladesh by redefining State principles from secularism to Islam and identification of citizens from Bengalis to Bangladeshis. Professor Ali Riaz (2010: 49) identifies the impact of these military interventions in the following words:

These military regimes succeeded in bringing Islam into the political discourse and facilitated the gaining of legitimacy for the Islamists – both constitutionally and politically. The lasting legacy of this era is the change it has brought to the entire discourse of Bangladeshi politics and the serious blow it delivered to the secular ideal.

This process of Bangladesh’s faltering democratisation, coupled with worldwide economic pressures resulting from the oil price hike in the mid-seventies, had a significant impact on the quality of democracy achieved in the country.

Although Bangladesh has had no tutelary period of transition from élite parliamentary politics to parliamentary democracy, the latter is regarded as the legitimate form of government by virtually all politically aware and participant groups of the population except for the Islamists (Stern 2001: 17). The deficiency in democratic consolidation was initially due to a lack of democratic experience, a perspective summarised by Hossain (2000: 525) in the following words:

Political instability should be viewed as a reflection of feudal character of a traditional society in which most people are uneducated, socially backward, and politically uninformed and hence possess unsophisticated character traits, including feudal or tribal rivalry.

The same commentator further points out that ‘[t]here exists a patron-client culture in all spheres of life that is behind the personalised, factionalised character of Bangladesh’s politics’ (Hossain 2000: 525). Consequently, the democratic progress is perceived to be constantly disturbed and infected by undemocratic tendencies, worsening the prevalent climate of mistrust in the country. However, the reality is far more complex.

Although Feng and Zak (1999: 162–163) argued that widely held determinants of democratic transitions like low per capita income, low levels of education and a lack of history of democratic experience and practice are factors weighing down the road to sustainable democracy, there are other significant factors which continue to affect the quality of democracy (Fisher 2013; Vigoda-Gadot and Mizrahi 2014). With regard to Bangladesh, Islam (2005) notes that although the rule of law underlies the entire Constitution, the concept is capable of different interpretations by different people and has, therefore, various shades of meaning. Typically, the Constitution of Bangladesh in the preamble proclaims the ‘rule of law’ as the prime objective of the Constitution and as a new habitat for substantive provisions aimed at achieving the rule of law. By itself, this is merely decorative and is not reflective of Bangladesh’s reality. The representative character of the government in Bangladesh is not confined to the central government but to the sphere of local government and all levels of administration. But this truly representative government is a misnomer unless free, fair and inclusive elections to reflect the wishes of the people can be ensured. One could actually go a little further and add that the expectation is that democracy ought to engage the bulk of the population in participation which is political. Such political participation means behaviour on the part of the mass public directed at influencing, directly or indirectly, the formulation, adoption and implementation of governmental or policy choices (Fishkin 2009: 45), for that is a hallmark of an inclusive and perhaps sophisticated democracy. Voting has become by far the most widely shared form of political participation and, although contributing money, time and effort to political causes; demonstrating; writing letters or emails to government officials; and signing petitions are all activities that involve large numbers of people, this level of advanced democracy has not yet been achieved in countries like Bangladesh. For Bangladesh, one can tick the box that there is a basic electoral governance only when the voting is participatory, and political parties enjoy a level playing field when free, fair and inclusive elections are held at regular intervals. Unfortunately, the culture of mistrust in Bangladesh is closely connected to and develops into what one may call a ‘culture of non-participation’. This thought arises in view of frequent parliamentary boycotts, hartals and a basic refusal of the opposition to engage in constructive discourse. Such obstructions indicate a serious and at times frustrating deficiency in the political culture, which impacts the overall quality of rudimentary democracy in Bangladesh.

It is indeed mainly the ‘free and fair election’ element of democracy which has been a prominent point of contention in Bangladesh over many years. Hossain (2000: 509) argues that although the common perception of Bangladesh’s political instability is fundamentally a self-inflicted national indulgence of trivial issues, in which all social groups willingly or unwillingly show their proclivities, this in itself does not tell the whole story and seems to be marred by rhetoric. Any attempt to identify other, deeper factors that may have caused political instability would require an investigation of the social, cultural, religious and political traits that create social and political disharmony. In analysing the need for a CTG mechanism in Bangladesh, these elements of social, historical, cultural, religious and political aspects are also discussed in this book, in Chapters 2, 3 and 4. In his article, Hossain (2000: 508–529) not only summarises the historical profile of the political parties that dominate Bangladesh’s politics, including thumbnail characteristics of voting behaviour, but also attempts to explain why these parties do not cooperate and follow parliamentary norms and practices to establish a mutually beneficial two-party political system. He points out that confrontational politics, as practised by these parties in Bangladesh, are a manifestation of an inbuilt undemocratic political culture in which each party seeks to monopolise State power as if the other does not even have the right to exist. Hossain (2000: 509) concludes that in an underdeveloped society like Bangladesh, the mere transfer of political power from the military to the politicians or the conduct of ritualistic elections does not necessarily establish a stable democratic political system. In such a society, the existing feudal political culture, often under the rubric of dynastic political leadership, is more likely to promote confrontation than stability and cause deterioration rather than an improvement in the governance of the State.

Other State institutions in Bangladesh, such as the judiciary, have been pliant and subject to political intervention and direction. Political and bureaucratic interference are the most significant impediments to police efficiency and have resulted in the worst forms of abuse including illegal detention, death in custody, torture and pervasive corruption. The result is almost universal public disdain for the police force. Political regimes have used the police, since their inception, to regularly harass political opponents, for example, by using the Special Powers Act of 1974 (Act XIV of 1974), which has provisions for preventative detention (promulgated on 9 February 1974), rather than using them to maintain public order or to give them the opportunity to develop as a neutral institution. In addition, since 2004, the Rapid Action Battalion (RAB), an élite anti-crime and anti-terrorism unit of the police, was created to combat criminal gang activity throughout the country. It has been accused by Amnesty International of a lack of accountability and for being responsible for at least 700 deaths from 2004 to 2011, which have been attributed to crossfire, extra-judicial killings and torture. According to Odhikar (a human rights organisation in Bangladesh), the statistics for extra-judicial killings in Bangladesh in 2012 were 70, rising to a massive 329 in 2013; 172 in 2014; and 185 in 2015. In 2013, according to the report, ‘among the 329 extra judicially killed by law enforcement agencies, 174 were extra judicially killed in relation to political violence’, mostly before the impending January 2014 national elections.

In addition, governmental accountability remains elusive and this lack of accountability stems from two important sources. On one level, it can be traced to the pre-independence legacy, relating to the bureaucratic-authoritarian political institutions that pervaded what was then East Pakistan, which led to bureaucrats yielding a significant amount of political and coercive power, exercising it with considerable impunity. This matter gives rise to questions about the extent to which unsupervised or unchecked bureaucratic discretion is responsible for abuses of power also causing the gradual infiltration of impunity into the electoral system. At another level, the country’s shaky transition to democracy, marred by conflicting decisions on what Bangladesh stands for as a nation and the issue of ‘Bangladesh’s identity’, has not done much to instil an atmosphere of accountability in general, including into the country’s bureaucracy.

The predicament over Bangladesh's identity has become more pronounced over time. The birth of what appeared to be a homogenous nation, with its majority Muslim population coexisting with non-Muslim and ethnic minorities, bound by the spirit of ethnicity and culture rather than religion in 1971, has altered over the years and has now deeply polarised the very nation into two broad categories: Muslim secularists and Muslim non-secularists. Let us keep the non-Muslim secularists separate for now because that group is in contention for a different reason, namely the issues that minorities face in a State. There is a serious rift between the less-conservative Muslims, who do not perceive secularism to pose any threat to Islam, and the more conservative (including Wahabi-influenced) Islamists, who identify secularism as a major threat to their main objective of establishing Deen, or Islamic social order, and who wish to declare Bangladesh as an Islamic Republic on the basis of the Sovereignty of Almighty Allah, whereby the Holy Qur'an and the Sunnah will be the only source of all laws in the Republic. The interplay and contestation between these two blocs have had a profound impact on Bangladesh's political landscape. Riaz (2016a: 216) pertinently asks whether this contestation is between a 'secularist' understanding of religion's private role and a 'non-secularist' understanding of the public presence of Islam. This contestation and, indeed, how other multiple contestations have played out, both in the context of a domestic historical narrative on identity construction and the global dimension of the relationship between religion and politics, is further explored in Chapter 3.

As parliament has been functioning in a partisan fashion, little effort has been made to scrutinise the bureaucracy on the issue of accountability. While there is political interference with the bureaucracy, which is manifest in the appointment, promotion and transfer of bureaucrats as well as in the allocation of State funds to particular public projects on an openly partisan basis, there is not much routine scrutiny on the work of bureaucracy. In addition, executive scrutiny is rather absent in parliament. Despite being in session, the parliament is often ineffective due to prolonged absences of the opposition from parliamentary sessions (customarily termed as a 'boycott' by the parties in opposition) or because parliament may have an opposition which is 'handpicked or coerced into that role' (Riaz 2014a: 152), as was evident in the post 2014 election with the Jatiya Party (JP) – part of the AL-led grand coalition government during its term of 2008–2013 – which was designated as 'the official parliamentary opposition ... essentially turning the 10th Parliament into one without any opposition party' (Riaz 2014a: 152–153). Both major political parties, AL and BNP, have justified their respective boycotts over the years by coming up with a myriad of allegations against the ruling party. This has done little to convince the electorate that such boycotts have in any way strengthened pluralistic governance in the country. This clearly also reflects the prevalent 'political culture of non-participation' over many years.

Even today, the political parties remain miles away from each other. Neither is willing to concede ground on any issue of relevance to Bangladeshis. The two political leaders have a well-known aversion to each other that has prevented them from interacting, even at a social level (Ahsan 2011b). Even when parliament is in session, the Speaker, elected generally from the members of the party in power, seldom acts neutrally in terms of allocating time for debates and in giving rulings on issues on procedure. In assessing the parliament's performance at the first session of the tenth parliament, Transparency International Bangladesh (TIB) has observed in its report that merely 1.8 per cent of the total time of the first session was spent on lawmaking.

Another instrument of accountability in a democracy is a free press and media. Although Bangladesh is gradually developing a press that is frequently critical of the ruling regime, journalists who are critical of a regime's performance risk being subjected to harassment (Bhuiyan 2012) and killings. Both the AL and BNP regimes have been seen to be very sensitive to criticism, among other things, of their human rights records. BNP has reacted with hostility to criticism of its treatment of minorities and the behaviour of some of its radical Islamist coalition partners. Possible ties of a few Bangladeshi political organisations to Islamic radicals have also clearly emerged (Hashmi 2009).

There are other important and mainly historical factors which have played a significant role in the arrested development of democracy in Bangladesh. Prominent here is a deep-rooted culture of mistrust which began first with mistrust of the British during the colonial era, followed by mistrust of the Pakistanis and their hegemonic efforts to suppress what used to be East Pakistan until 1971. Presently, in post-independence Bangladesh, there is ample evidence of blatant mistrust of major forces engaged in ruling the nation, including the aggressive climate of adversarialism which exists between the government and the opposition. This is because determining factors that create the conditions of trust such as fairness, transparency, accountability, reliability and discourse have been largely absent from the political arena. Such deficiencies are embedded in the mindset of respective opposition parties, and even of the electorate, to the effect that no government in power in Bangladesh is able to give a free, fair and participatory election to the citizens that would result in a representative government, as is evident from the electorate and stakeholders' opinions about elections held under political governments. Given this complex backdrop, elections and election results in Bangladesh have almost always been a foregone conclusion, rendering no positive effects on the political process. The 'winner takes all' rule literally means taking it all in Bangladesh, including the civil service, the Election Commission (EC), the police and, these days, most unfortunately to a certain extent, the judiciary.

It is difficult for democracies to operate effectively without mutual trust between various players and institutions, as this is a major pre-condition for effectively managing political, social and economic affairs (Vigoda-Gadot and Mizrahi 2014; Warren 1999). Increasing trust in democracies is thus imperative for improving the management of the democratic State in the wider context of an examination of the various theoretical inputs into a governance system. In this context, in Bangladesh, the need for a neutral umpire in the electoral playground was deemed necessary to increase and foster trust and be an instrument which is legitimate, pragmatic, effective, efficient and essential. While the starting point for the CTG was a desperate attempt to hold free and fair elections after the demise of long-term military rule, there continued a crucial need for such a system to remain in order to develop a system of regular free, fair and participatory election culture, including its necessary management and a peaceful transition of power from one democratically elected government to another. The nation understood that, without this, the country did not stand even the remotest chance of stepping into a basic functional electoral democracy.

INTRODUCTION

Hence the analytical focus of this book falls on the CTG institution as a critical tool for ultimately securing a system of good electoral governance, suitable for Bangladesh. The CTG has had the opportunity of being a bridge between citizens and the political system for 20 years. The political system had suffered the most from a perennial crisis in trust and almost childishly stubborn non-participation, be it in engaging in discourse, in elections or in parliament. Regrettably, this phenomenon prevails. In this wider context, the unilateral abolition of the CTG itself, whose original mandate was to serve as a bridge between peoples' expectations of safeguarding free and fair elections and the frail political realm, has been neither pragmatically altruistic nor constructive.

References

- Abel, C F and Sementelli, Arthur (2002) 'Power, emancipation and the administrative state'. Administrative Theory & Praxis, 24(2): 253–278.
- Acemoglu, Daron and Robinson, James A (2009) Economic origins of dictatorship and democracy. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.
- Agar, Herbert (1938) 'Bases of democracy'. The Public Opinion Quarterly, Special Supplement: Public Opinion in a Democracy, 2(1): 86–88.
- Ahmad, Khurshid (2000) 'Islam and Democracy: Some conceptual and contemporary dimensions'. The Muslim World, 90(1–2): 1–19.
- Ahmar, Moonis (2005) Violence and terrorism in South Asia 1971–2004. Colombo: Regional Centre for Strategic Studies.
- Ahmed, A F Salauddin (1965) Social ideas and social change in Bengal 1818–1835. Dhaka: RDDHI.
- Ahmed, A F Salauddin (2007) History and heritage: Reflections on society politics and culture of South Asia. Dhaka: University Press Limited.
- Ahmed, Emajuddin (1988) Military rule and the myth of democracy. Dhaka: University Press Limited.
- Ahmed, Emajuddin (2005) 'Military rule, civilization and electoral corruption: Bangladesh and Pakistan in perspective'. Asian Studies, 25(1): 73–94.
- Ahmed, Fakhruddin (1998) The Caretakers: A first hand account of the interim government of Bangladesh (1990–1991). Dhaka: University Press Limited.
- Ahmed, Moeen U (2007) 'The challenging interface of democracy and security'. The Daily Star, (4 April).
- Ahmed, Moudud (1995) Democracy and the challenge of development. Dhaka: University Press Limited.
- Ahmed, Moudud (2014) Bangladesh, Emergency and the Aftermath. Dhaka: University Press Limited.
- Ahmed, Nizam (2004) Non-party caretaker government in Bangladesh: Experience and prospect. Dhaka: University Press Limited.
- Ahmed, Rafiuddin (1981) The Bengal Muslims 1871–1906: A quest for identity. Delhi: Oxford University Press.
- Ahmed, Sufia (2011) Diaries of Justice Muhammad Ibrahim (1960–1966). Dhaka: Academic Press and Publishers Library.
- Ahmed, Syed Refaat (ed.) (2008) The Ishtiaq Papers. Dhaka: University Press Limited.
- Ahsan, Syed Badrul (2006) Impressions: Bangladesh 1975 and other writings. Oxford: Wessex Press (Wantage) Ltd.
- Ahsan, Syed Badrul (2011a) 'Batting it out in Bangladesh'. The Indian Express, (20 August).
- Ahsan, Syed Badrul (2011b) 'Forty years on.' The Indian Express, (11 April).
- Ahsan, Syed Badrul (2011c) 'Ground realities'. The Indian Express, (18 June).
- Ahsan, Syed Badrul (2012) 'The generation trap'. The Daily Star, (5 October).
- Ahsan, Syed Badrul (2014) From rebel to founding father Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. New Delhi: Niyogi Books.
- Aidt, Toke S and Dutta, Jayasri (2005) 'Policy compromises: Corruption and regulation in a democracy'. 25 pp.
- Ain O Shalish Kendra (ASK) (2006) Annual report. Dhaka: Ain O Shalish Kendra.
- Al-Jabri, Mohammed Abed (2009) Democracy, human rights and law in Islamic thought. New York: I. B. Tauris & Co Ltd. in association with Centre for Arab Unity Studies.
- Alamgir, Jalal (July 2009) 'Bangladesh's Fresh Start', Journal of Democracy, 20(3), p. 51 cited in Riaz (2016a: 87).
- Ali, Kazancigil (1997) 'Connecting political institutions to democracy'. In: Hepper, Metin, Ali, Kazancigil and Rockman Bert A. (eds.) Institutions and democratic statecraft. Boulder: Westview Press, pp. 299–308.
- Ali, S M (1973) After the dark night: Problems of Sheikh Mujibur Rahman. Dhaka: University Press Limited.
- Ali, Tariq (1970) Pakistan: Military rule or people's power. New York: William Morrow.
- Alim, Syed Fattahul (2012) 'Confrontational or infantile politics?' Forum (A monthly publication of the Daily Star), 6(4): (April).

Allen, Amy (2011) Democracy in what state. New York: Columbia University Press.

Allott, Anthony (1980) The limits of law. London: Butterworths.

Alvarado, Ruben (ed.) (2009) The doctrine of state & the principles of state law: Friedrich Julius Stahl. Aalten: Worldbridge Publishing.

Amnesty International (2011) 'Crimes unseen – Extrajudicial executions in Bangladesh', (August). Amnesty International Report. London: Amnesty International.

An-Na'im, Abdullahi Ahmed (1996) Toward an Islamic reformation: Civil liberties, human rights, and international law. New York: Syracuse University Press.

An-Na'im, Abdullahi Ahmed (2009) Islam and the secular state: Negotiating the future of sharia'a. Cambridge: Harvard University Press.

Anam, Mahfuz (2011) 'Abolition of the caretaker system: Now the proponent is the opponent and the opponent, and the opposer is the supporter'. The Daily Star, (30 June).

Anam, Mahfuz (2012) 'Awami League's moral defeat: Government holds Dhaka city hostage'. The Daily Star, (13 March).

Anam, Mahfuz (2015) 'Internment of BNP Chief: A dangerous precedent'. The Daily Star, (8 January).

Anam, Mahfuz (2016) 'Democracy is what the winner says it is'. The Daily Star, (6 December).

Anam, Tahmina (2014) 'Bangladesh does not have to go back to being a basket case'. The Guardian, (7 January).

Andaleeb, Syed Saad (2007) Political culture in Bangladesh: Perspectives and analyses. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Anderson, James (ed.) (2002) Transnational democracy: Political spaces and border crossings. London: Routledge.

Anderson, Lisa (ed.) (1999) Transitions to democracy. New York: Columbia University Press.

Anderson, Robert S (1976) 'Impressions of Bangladesh: The rule of arms and the politics of exhortation'. Pacific Affairs, 49(3): 443–475.

Anisuzzaman, (1993) Creativity, reality and identity. Dhaka: International Centre for Bengal Studies.

Armstrong, Jerome and Zuniga, Markos Moulitsas (2006) Crashing the gate: Netroots, grassroots and the rise of people-powered politics. White River Junction, VT: Chelsea Green Publishing Company.

Aronowitz, Stanley and Bratsis, Peter (eds.) (2002) Paradigm lost, state theory reconsidered. Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press.

Asafuddowlah (2010) Of pains and panics. Dhaka: Adorn Publications.

Asian Human Rights Commission (2014) 'Bangladesh: Authoritarian obstinacy wins, democracy loses', (08 January).

Askvik, Steinar and Ishtiaq, Jamil (2013) 'The Institutional Trust Paradox in Bangladesh'. Public Organisation Review, 13(4): 459–476.

Avari, Burjor (2007) India: The ancient past: A history of the Indian sub-continent from c. 7000 BC to AD 1200. Oxford: Routledge.

Axtmann, Roland (2004) 'The state of the state: The model of the modern state and its contemporary transformation'. International Political Science Review, 25(3): 259–279.

Bakht, Farid (2007) 'Caught on the back foot'. Economic and Political Weekly, 42(48): 8–9.

Bandyopadhyay, Sekhar (2004) From Plassey to partition: A history of modern India. Hyderabad: Orient BlackSwan.

'Bangladesh general elections: Bangladesh will hold its 10th general elections on 5 January amid serious questions over the credibility of the electoral process' (2014). BBC News, (03 January).

'Bangladesh's new friends' (1975) New Statesman, (22 August). p. 217.

Barman, Dalem Ch, Rahman M Golam and Siddiqui, Tasneem (2002) 'Democracy Report for Bangladesh'. Country Reports for the IDEA State of Democracy Project. Stockholm: Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance.

Barnes, Marian and Newman, Janet and Sullivan, Helen (2007) Power, participation and political renewal: Case studies in public participation. Bristol: The Policy Press.

Barrow, Clyde W (2005) 'The return of state: Globalization, state theory and the new imperialism'. New Political Science, 27(2): 123–145.

Bass, Gary J (2014) The blood telegram: Nixon, Kissinger and a forgotten genocide. London: Hurst & Company.

Baswedan, Anies Rasyid (2004) 'Political Islam in Indonesia: Present and future trajectory'. Asian Survey, 44(5): 669–690.

Baxter, Craig (1971) 'Pakistan votes – 1970'. Asian Survey, 11(3): 197–218.

BBC (2014) 'Bangladesh general elections: Bangladesh will hold its 10th general elections on 5 January amid serious questions over the credibility of the electoral process' BBC News, (03 January).

Belamy, Richard (2007) Political constitutionalism. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Bell, Daniel A (2006) Beyond liberal democracy: Political thinking for an East Asian context. Princeton: Princeton University Press.

Bentham, Jeremy (1843) The Works of Jeremy Bentham (11 Volumes), (ed.) John Bowring.

Bergman, David (2017) 'Recording of Bangladesh Paramilitary Officer lifts lid on extra-judicial killings and forced disappearances', The Wire, (06 April).

Bertocci, Peter J (1982) 'Bangladesh in the early 1980s: Praetorian politics in an intermediate regime'. Asian Survey, 22(10): 988–1008.

Bertocci, Peter J (1985) 'Bangladesh in 1984: A year of protracted turmoil'. Asian Survey, A survey of Asia in 1984: Part II, 25(2): 155–168.

Bhattacharjee, Arun (1973) Dateline Mujibnagar. Delhi: Vikas. p. 38.

Bhaumik, Subir (2017) 'Behind the 'RAW' tirade.' The Daily Star, (18 March).

Bhaumik, Subir (2014) 'Difficult Victory'. The Telegraph, Calcutta, India, (26 January).

Bhowmick, Nilanjana (2015) 'Political turmoil sparks fresh violence in Bangladesh'. The Time, (15 January).

Bhuiyan, Mohammad N (2012) The fundamental right to freedom of the press in Bangladesh. London: SOAS (Unpublished Ph.D. thesis).

Bingham, Tom (2011) The Rule of Law. London: Penguin.

Bjornlund, Eric C (2004) Beyond free and fair: Monitoring elections and building democracy. Washington, DC: Woodrow Wilson Center Press.

Blaug, Ricardo (2010) How power corrupts: Cognition and democracy in organizations. Basingstoke: Palgrave Macmillan.

Bose, Sarmila (2005) 'Anatomy of violence: An analysis of civil war in East Pakistan in 1971'. Economic and Political Weekly, 40(41) (October): 8–14.

Bose, Sugata and Jalal, Ayesha (2011) Modern South Asia: History, culture, political economy. London: Routledge.

Boucher, David and Kelly, Paul (eds.) (2003) Political thinkers: From Socrates to the present. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Bowman, Kirk S (1996) 'Taming the tiger: Militarization and democracy in Latin America'. Journal of Peace Research, 33(3): 289–308.

Brandt, Michele and Kaplan, Jeffrey A (1996) 'The tension between women's rights and religious rights: reservations to CEDAW by Egypt, Bangladesh and Tunisia'. Journal of Law and Religion, 12(1): 105–142.

Brass, Paul R (ed.) (2013) Routledge handbook of South Asian politics: India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, and Nepal. Oxford: Routledge.

Bressman, Lisa Shultz (2007) 'Deference and democracy'. Public Law and Legal Theory Working Paper, 06–20. 45 pp. Nashville: Vanderbilt University Law School.

Brooks, Rosa Ehrenreich (2005) 'Failed states, or the state as failure?' The University of Chicago Law Review, 72(4): 1159–1196.

Broomfield, J H (1968) Elite conflict in a plural society: Twentieth century Bengal. Berkeley: University of California Press.

Brown, Judith M (2003) Nehru: A political life. New Haven: Yale University Press.

Buncombe, Andrew (2010) 'Battle of the Begums' brings Bangladesh to a standstill.' The Independent, (1 December).

Button, Mark E (2008) Contract, culture and citizenship: Transformative liberalism from Hobbes to Rawls. University Park Pennsylvania State University Press.

'CA announces 7 priority tasks for administration'. (2001) The Bangladesh Observer, (20 August).

Cane, Peter and Conaghan, Joanne (eds.) (2008) The new Oxford companion to law. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Canfora, Luciano (2006) Democracy in Europe: A history of an ideology. Oxford: Blackwell Publishing.

'Caretaker government: "Partisan" persons included: Hasina' (2001) The Bangladesh Observer, (24 July).

'Caretaker govt has taken partisan steps: Kibria'. (2001) The Bangladesh Observer, (21 August).

'Caretaker govt's faulty steps' (2001) The Bangladesh Observer, (24 August).

'Caretaker system declared illegal' (2011) The Daily Star, (11 May).

'Caretaker system declared illegal: SC' (2011) New Age, (10 May).

Carothers, Thomas (ed.) (2006) Promoting the rule of law abroad in search of knowledge. Washington, DC: Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Cawthra, Gavin and Luckham, Robin (eds.) (2003) Governing insecurity: Democratic control of military and security establishments in transitional democracies. London: Zed Books Limited.

Chabal, Patrick (1998) 'A few considerations on democracy in Africa'. International Affairs, 74(2): 289–303.

Chadda, Maya (2000) Building democracy in South Asia: India, Nepal and Pakistan. Boulder: Lynne Rienner Publishers Inc.

Chambers, Robert (1997) Whose reality counts? Putting the first last. Rugby: Practical Action Publishing.

Chambers, Samuel A (2005) 'Working on the democratic imagination and the limits of deliberative democracy'. Political Research Quarterly, 58(4): 619–623.

Chambers, Simone and Kopstein, Jeffrey (2001) 'Bad civil society'. Political Theory, 29(6): 837–865.

Chandra, Anjana Motihar (2007) India condensed: 5000 years of history & culture. Singapore: Marshall Cavendish International (Asia) Private Limited.

Chandra, Bipan (1979) Nationalism and colonialism in modern India. Hyderabad: Orient BlackSwan.

Charles, Guy-Uriel E (2007) 'Democracy and distortion'. Cornell Law Review, 92(30): 101–173.

Chatterji, Brig. (ret.) S K (2014) 'Bangladesh's bumpy ride'. The Diplomat, (14 February).

Chattopadhyay, Saayam (2011) 'Bengali masculinity and the national masculine: Some conjectures for interpretation'. South Asia Research, 31(3): 265–279.

Cheema, G Shabbir (2005) Building democratic institutions: Governance reforms in developing countries. Bloomfield: Kumarian Press Inc.

Chiba, Masaji (ed.) (1986) Asian indigenous law. London: KPI Limited.

Chiba, Masaji (ed.) (1989) Legal pluralism: Toward a general theory through Japanese legal culture. Tokyo: Tokai University Press.

Chiba, Masaji (ed.) (1998) 'Other phases of legal pluralism in the contemporary world'. Ratio Juris, 11(3): 228–245.

Chiba, Masaji (ed.) (2002) Legal cultures in human society. A collection of articles and essays. Tokyo: Shinzansha International.

Chibundu, Maxwell O (2006) 'Political ideology as a religion: The idolatry of democracy'. University of Maryland Law Journal of Race, Religion, Gender and Class, 6(1): 117–157.

Chomsky, Noam (2006) Failed states: The abuse of power and the assault on democracy. New York: Henry Hold and Company, LLC.

Chu, Yun-Han , Diamond, Larry , Nathan, Andrew J. and Shin, Doh Chull (eds.) (2008) How East Asians view democracy. New York: Columbia University Press.

Chua, Amy (2002) World on fire: Exporting free market democracy breeds ethnic hatred and global instability. New York: Doubleday.

Chowdhury, Abdur Rahman (2012) 'Caretaker government – the best available option'. New Age, (7 June).

Chowdhury, Afsan (ed.) (2007) Bangladesh 1971. Dhaka: Mowla Brothers.

Choudhury, G W (1993) The last days of united Pakistan. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Choudhury, G W (2011) The last days of united Pakistan. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Choudhury, Shamila N (2013) 'Is Pakistan's military out of politics for good?' In: Pakistan votes: A weekly look inside the historic 2013 elections. Foreign Policy magazine, (7 March).

Citrin, Jack (1974) 'The political relevance of trust in government'. The American Political Science Review, 68(3): 973–975.

Coggan, Philip (2013) The last vote: the threats to western democracy. London: Penguin.

Cohen, Stephen Philip (2004) The idea of Pakistan. Washington, DC: Brookings Institution Press.

Cooke, Bill and Kothari, Uma (eds.) (2004) Participation: The new tyranny? London: Zed Books.

Corbridge, Stuart and Harriss, John (2000) Reinventing India: Liberalization, Hindu nationalism and popular democracy. Cambridge: Polity Press.

'Corruption, nepotism dog civil service recruitments: Insiders blame political intervention'. (2005) New Age, (27 November).

Cotterrell, Roger (1995) Law's community: Legal theory in sociological perspective. Oxford: Clarendon Press.

Cotterrell, Roger (2006) Law, culture and society. Hampshire: Ashgate.

Coulson, Noel J (1964) A history of Islamic law. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press.

Coulson, Noel J (1968) 'Islamic law'. In: Derrett, J D (ed.) An introduction to legal systems. London: Sweet & Maxwell.

Coulson, Noel J (1969) Conflicts and tensions in Islamic jurisprudence. Chicago: Chicago University Press.

Cownie, F C (2004) Legal academics: Culture and identities. Oxford: Hart Publishing.

Cox, Caroline and Marks, John (2003) The 'West', Islam and Islamism: Is ideological Islam compatible with liberal democracy? London: Institute of the Study of Civil Society.

Cox, Oliver C (1947) 'Modern democracy and the class struggle'. The Journal of Negro Education, 16(2): 155–164.

Croce, M (2014) 'What is legal pluralism all about?' Jura Gentium, Vol. XI: Pluralismo Giuridico, pp. 166–186. Annuale 2014.

'CTG should not be disturbed by any means' (2001) The Bangladesh Observer, (25 July).

Cunningham, Frank (2001) Theories of democracy: A critical introduction. London: Routledge.

'The curious case of caretaker government' (2013) The Bangladesh Chronicle, (30 July).

Curtis, Lisa A (2007) 'Protecting democracy in Bangladesh'. Web Memo, No. 1559 (17 July). Washington, DC: The Heritage Foundation.

Dahl, Robert A (1971) Polyarchy: Participation and opposition. New Haven: Yale University Press.

Dahl, Robert A (1989) Democracy and its critics. New Haven: Yale University Press.

Dahl, Robert A (1998) On democracy. New Haven: Yale University Press.

Dalrymple, William (2006) The last Mughal: The fall of Delhi, 1857. London: Bloomsbury Publishing.

Dalrymple, William (2015) 'The great divide'. The New Yorker.

Dam, Shubhankar (2004) 'Is Indian democracy dependent on a statute?' Research Collection School of Law, Singapore Management University, Paper 7.

Das, Gurcharan (2003) 'Democracy and capitalism in India'. Globalist, (11 May).

Datta, Sreeradha (2007) 'Islamic militancy in Bangladesh'. South Asia: Journal of South Asian Studies, 30(1): 167–168.

Datta, Sreeradha (2009) Caretaking democracy: Political process in Bangladesh, 2006–2008. New Delhi: Institute for Defence Studies and Analysis.

D'Costa, Bina (2012) 'Bangladesh in 2011: Weak state building and different foreign policy'. Asian Survey, 52(1): 147–156.

De, Amalendu (1977) 'Bengali Intelligentsia's attitudes to the Permanent Settlement'. Social Scientist, 5(8): 18–40.

De Burca, Grainne (2008) 'Developing democracy beyond the state'. Columbia Journal of Transnational Law, 46(2): 221–278.

Dearden, Lizzie, (2016) 'Bangladesh attacks: ISIS militants tortured hostages who could not recite Quran in 12-hour siege at Dhaka Cafe'. The Independent, (2 July).

D'Entreves, A P (1965) Aquinas selected political writings. Oxford: Basil Blackwell.

Derrett, J Duncan M (1968) Religion, law and the state in India. London: Faber & Faber.

DeSouza, Peter Ronald (2010) 'Bangladesh building an effective, capable and inclusive state – democracy, nationalism and the state in Bangladesh'. Background paper for UNDP democratic governance group, community of practice meeting, Senegal (February): pp. 12–18.

'Despicable offence committed' (2011) The Daily Star, (19 July).

Dharamsdani, M.D. (ed.) (2001) Multi-party democracies in South Asia. New Delhi: Anmol Publications (P) Ltd.

Diamond, Larry and Plattner Marc, F. (eds.) (1996) Civil – military relations and democracy (A Journal of Democracy Book). Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press.

Dias, R W M and Hughes, G B J (1957) Jurisprudence. London: Butterworths.

Di Palma, Giuseppe (1990) To craft democracies: An essay on democratic transitions. Berkeley: University of California Press.

Dil, Anwar S (2000) Bengali language movement to Bangladesh. Dhaka: Ferozsons.

Donlan, Seán Patrick and Urscheler, Lukas Heckendorn (2014) Concepts of law. London: Ashgate.

Doorenspleet, Renske (2006) Democratic transitions: Exploring the structural sources of the fourth wave. New Delhi: Viva Books Private Limited.

Dovi, Suzanne (2014) 'Political Representation'. In: Edward N. Zalta (ed.). The Stanford Encyclopaedia of Philosophy.

Dowding, Keith (1996) Power: Concepts in the social sciences. London: Open University Press.

Dryzek, John S (2003) 'Social choice theory and deliberative democracy: A reconciliation'. British Journal of Political Science, 33(1): 1–28.

Dunleavy, Patrick and O'Leary, Brendan (1987) Theories of the state: The politics of liberal democracy. New York: Palgrave Macmillan.

Dunn, Judy (1988) The beginnings of social understanding. Oxford: Blackwell Publishers Ltd.

Dyson, R W (2008) Aquinas political writings. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Dyzenhaus, David (2006) The constitution of law: Legality in a time of emergency. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Eaton, Richard M (1993) The rise of Islam and the Bengal frontier, 1204–1760. Berkeley: University of California Press.

Eaton, Richard M (2001) 'Who are the Bengal Muslims? Conversion and Islamisation in Bengal'. In: Rafiuddin Ahmed (ed.), Understanding the Bengal Muslims: Interpretative Essays. New Delhi: Oxford University Press.

The Economist (2012) 'The path through the fields: Bangladesh and development'. The Economist, (3 November).

The Economist (2013a) 'The campaign trail: The ruling party will win Bangladesh's election. The country will lose'. The Economist, (21 December).

The Economist (2013b) 'Zero sum politics: As an election looms, Bangladesh's feuding leaders live down to expectations'. The Economist, (02 November).

The Economist (2014a) 'Electoral farce in Bangladesh: The minus one solution'. The Economist, (03 January).

The Economist (2014b) 'One and only one'. The Economist, (20 September).

The Economist (2014c) 'Dialling down: Politics and the past in Bangladesh'. The Economist, (1 November).

Economist Intelligence Unit (2012) 'The frequency of street protests increases', (7 March). London: The Economist.

Economist Intelligence Unit (2010a) 'Country forecast: Bangladesh'. London: The Economist.

Economist Intelligence Unit (2010b) 'Country report: Bangladesh'. London: The Economist.

Edel, Abraham (1944) 'The relations of science and democracy'. The Journal of Philosophy, 41(26): 701–710.

Edgar, Andrew (2006) Habermas: The key concepts. Oxford: Routledge.

Edgeworth, Linda and Finn Daniel (2000) Pre-election technical assessment: Republic of Bangladesh. Washington, DC: International Foundation for Election Systems.

'EC to exercise more power' (2001) The Bangladesh Observer, (21 August).

Ehrlich, Eugen (1936) Fundamental principles of the sociology of law. Cambridge: Harvard University Press.

Ehrlich, Eugen (2009) Fundamental principles of the sociology of law. London: Transaction Publishers.

Eickelman, D F and Piscatori, J (1996) Muslim politics. Princeton: Princeton University Press.

Eisgruber, Christopher L (2002) 'Dimensions of democracy'. Princeton Law and Public Affairs Working Paper Series, 02–007. 50 pp. Princeton University: Program in law and Public Affairs.

El-Solh, Raghid (1993) 'Islamist attitudes towards democracy: A review of the ideas of al-Ghazali'. British Journal of Middle Eastern Studies, 20(1): 57–63.

Elkins, Zachary (2000) 'Gradations of democracy? Empirical tests of alternative conceptualizations'. American Journal of Political Science, 44(2): 293–300.

Elshtain, Jean Bethke (1993) Democracy on trial. Concord, Ont.: Anansi.

Ely, John Hart (1980) Democracy and distrust: A theory of judicial review. Cambridge: Harvard University Press.

Esposito, John L (ed.) (1995) The Oxford encyclopedia of the modern Islamic world. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Esposito, John L , Voll, John O and Baker, Osman (eds.) (2008) Asian Islam in the 21st century. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Euben, J Peter (1993) 'Democracy ancient and modern'. Political Science and Politics, 26(3): 478–481.

Evans, Geoffrey and Whitefield, Stephen (1995) 'The politics and economics of democratic commitment: Support for democracy in transition societies'. British Journal of Political Science, 25(4): 485–514.

Fair, Christine and Levitas, Kerem (2005) Peace Brief (May). Washington, DC: United States Institute of Peace.

Fairfield, Paul (2008) Why democracy. Albany: University of New York Press.

Farrell, David M (2001) Electoral systems: A comparative introduction. New York: Palgrave Macmillan.

Femia, Joseph V (1993) Marxism and democracy. Oxford: Clarendon Press.

Feng, Yi and Zak, Paul J (1999) 'The determinants of democratic transitions'. The Journal of Conflict Resolution, 43(2): 162–177.

Fidrmuc, Jan , (2001) 'Economic reform, democracy and growth during post-communist transition'. William Davidson Institute Working Paper 372 (March). Ann Arbor: William Davidson Institute.

Fiorino, Nadia and Ricciuti, Roberto (2007) 'Determinants of direct democracy'. Presented at CESIFO Area Conference on Public Sector Economics, (April). Munich: CESIFO.

Fisher, Rebecca (ed.) (2013) Managing democracy, managing dissent: Capitalism, democracy and the organization of consent. London: Corporate Watch.

Fisher, William F (1997) 'Doing good? The politics and antipolitics of NGO practices'. Annual Review of Anthropology, 26: 439–464.

Fishkin, James S (1997) The voice of the people: Public opinion & democracy. New Haven and London: Yale University Press.

Fishkin, James S (2009) When the people speak: Deliberative democracy and public consultation. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Foblets, Marie-Claire (2012) 'Religion and rethinking the public-private divide: Introduction'. In: Ferrari, Silvio and Pastorelli, Sabrina (eds.) Religion in public spaces: A European perspective. Surrey: Ashgate.

Foucault, Michel (1988) Power/knowledge: Selected interviews and other writings 1972–1977. Gordon, Colin (ed.). New York: Pantheon Books.

Freedon, Michael (1998) 'Is nationalism a distinct ideology?' Political Studies, 46: 748–765.

Freeman, M D A (2001) Lloyd's introduction to jurisprudence. London: Sweet & Maxwell.

French, Patrick (2011), Liberty or death: India's journey to independence and division. London: Penguin Books.

Frey, Bruno S (2003) 'Direct democracy for transition countries'. Institute for Empirical Research in Economics, Working Paper Series, (July) 165. 36 pp. Zurich: University of Zurich.

Fukuyama, Francis (1995) Trust: The social virtues and the creation of prosperity. New York: Free Press Paperbacks.

Fukuyama, Francis (2004) State building: Governance and world order in the twenty-first century. London: Profile Books.

Fukuyama, Francis (2011) The origins of political order. London: Profile Books.

Gallo, Carmenza (1992) 'Review: Democracy by default?' Sociological Forum, 7(4): 711–718.

Gandhi, Mohandas Karamchand (2008) Autobiography: The story of my experiments with truth. BN Publishing.

Gani, Aisha (2014) 'Bangladesh has little to celebrate after the most violent election day in its history'. The Guardian, (15 January).

Gankovsky, Yuri V (1974) 'The social structure of society in the People's Republic of Bangladesh'. Asian Survey, 14(3): 220–230.

Gardner, James A (2005) 'Democracy without a net? Separation of powers and the idea of self-sustaining constitutional constraints on undemocratic behaviour'. St. John's Law Review, 79: 293–317.

Ghosal, U N (1957) Studies in Indian history and culture. Calcutta.

Ghosh, Partha S (1993) 'Bangladesh at crossroads: Religion and politics'. Asian Survey, South Asia: Responses to the Ayodhya crisis, 33(7): 697–710.

Ghosh, Partha S (2015) 'The other side of partition: Resonances on cultural expressions'. South Asia Research, 35(1): 42–60.

Ghosh, Subhasri (2014) 'Population movements in West Bengal: a study of Nadia district, 1947–51'. South Asia Research, 34(2): 1–20.

Gillin, J L (1919) 'The origin of democracy'. The American Journal of Sociology, 24(6): 704–714.

Gills, Barry, Rocamora, Joel and Wilson, Richard (eds.) (1993) Low intensity democracy: Political power in the new world order. London: Pluto.

Gleditsch, Kristian S and Ward, Michael D (1997) 'Double take: A re-examination of democracy and autocracy in modern polities'. The Journal of Conflict Resolution, 41(3): 361–383.

Goode, Luke (2005) Jürgen Habermas: Democracy and the public sphere. London: Pluto Press.

Goyal, Ashima and Jha, A K (2004) 'Dictatorship, democracy and institutions: Macropolicy in China and India'. Economic and Political Weekly, 39(42): 16–22.

Griffith-Jones, Robin (ed.) (2013) Islam and English law: Rights, responsibilities and the place of shari'a. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Grofman, Bernard (1993) 'Lessons of Athenian democracy: Editor's introduction'. Political Science and Politics, 26(3): 471–474.

Gross, Oren and Aolain Fionnuala, Ni (2006) Law in times of crisis: Emergency powers in theory and practice. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Grover, Virender (ed.) (1993) Political-thinkers of modern India, volume 22. New Delhi: Deed and Deed Publications.

Guha, Ramachandra (2008) India after Gandhi: The history of the world's largest democracy. London: Pan Books.

Habermas, Jürgen (1962) The structural transformation of the public sphere: An inquiry into a category of bourgeois society (German: Strukturwandel der Öffentlichkeit. Untersuchungen zu einer Kategorie der bürgerlichen Gesellschaft). Translated by Burger, Thomas and Lawrence, Frederick (1989). Cambridge: Polity Press.

Habermas, Jürgen (1979) Communication and the evolution of society. New York: Polity Press.

Habermas, Jürgen (1989/1962) The structural transformation of the public sphere. An inquiry into a category of bourgeois society, Burger, Thomas and Lawrence, Frederick (trans). Cambridge: Polity Press.

Habermas, Jürgen (1996/2012) Between facts and norms: Contributions to a discourse theory of law and democracy. Cambridge: Polity Press.

Habermas, Jürgen (1998) Inclusion of the other: Studies in political theory. In: Cronin, Ciaran and Degrieff, Pablo (eds). Cambridge: Polity Press.

Habermas, Jürgen (2001) 'Constitutional democracy: A paradoxical union of contradictory principles'. Political Theory, 29(6): 766–781.

Habermas, Jürgen (2003) Truth and justification. Cambridge: Polity Press.

Habermas, Jürgen (2006) 'Religion in the public sphere'. European Journal of Philosophy, 14(1): 1–25.

Habermas, Jürgen (2011a) The structural transformation of the public sphere. Cambridge: Polity Press.

Habermas, Jürgen (ed.) (2011b) An awareness of what is missing: Faith and reason in a post-secular age. Cambridge: Polity Press.

Habermas, Jürgen and Seidman, Steven (ed.) (1989) Jürgen Habermas on society & Politics. Boston: Beacon Press.

Hagerty, Devin T (2007) 'Bangladesh in 2006: Living in interesting times'. Asian Survey, 47(1): 105–112.

Hagerty, Devin T (2008) 'Bangladesh in 2007: Democracy interrupted, political and environmental challenges ahead'. Asian Survey, 48(1): 177–183.

Haider, Zaglul (1999) 'The role of military in the politics of Bangladesh: Mujib, Zia and Ershad regimes'. Journal of South Asian and Middle Eastern Studies, 23(3): 65–68.

Hailsham, Lord (1976) 'Elective dictatorship'. Richard Dimbleby Lecture (9 October).

Hajari, Nisid (2015) Midnight's furies: The deadly legacy of India's partition. Stroud: Amberley Publishing.

Hakim, Muhammad A (1993) Bangladesh politics: The Shahabuddin interregnum. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Hakim, Muhammad A (1994) 'The Mirpur parliamentary by-election in Bangladesh'. Asian Survey, 34(8): 738–747.

Hall, Peter A (ed.) (1986) Governing the economy: The politics of state intervention in Britain and France. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Hansen, Mogens Herman (1992) 'The traditions of the Athenian democracy A.D. 1750–1990'. Greece & Rome, 2nd Ser., 39(1): 14–30.

Haque, A K M Masudul (2008) 'Emergency powers and caretaker government in Bangladesh'. Journal of the Australian Law Teachers Association, 9(1): 81–94.

Hardin, Russel (2003) Liberalism, constitutionalism and democracy. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Harris, J W (1980) Legal philosophies. London: Butterworths.

Harris, John (2003) India: the bitter fruits of grandiose ambition, (March). The Hague, the Netherlands: In: Clingendael Institute (Unpublished). (Mimeograph with the author).

Harrison, Frances (2013) Political Islam & the elections in Bangladesh. London: New Millennium.

Hart, H L A (1961) The concept of law. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Hart, H L A (2012) The concept of law. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Hartmann, Thom (2004) What would Jefferson do? A return to democracy. New York: Harmony Books.

Hasan, Ahmad (1984) The doctrine of Ijma in Islam. Islamabad: Islamic Research Institute.

Hasan, Manzoor and Zakaria, Sultan Mohammed (2016) 'Reflection on Bangladesh's democratic governance', The Daily Star, (30 July).

Hasan, Mubashar (2011) 'Democracy and political Islam in Bangladesh'. South Asia Research, 31(2): 97–117.

Hasan, Mubashar (2012) 'The geopolitics of political Islam in Bangladesh'. Harvard Asia Quarterly, Vol: 14(1–2): 60–69.

Hasanuzzaman, Al Masud (1998) Role of opposition in Bangladesh politics. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Hashmi, Arshi Saleem (2009) 'Religious and militant groups in Bangladeshi politics: A case study'. Institute of Regional Studies, (December). Islamabad: Institute of Regional Studies.

Hashmi, Nader (2009) Islam, secularism and liberal democracy. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Hawkins, Darren (2001) 'Democratization theory and nontransitions: Insights from Cuba'. Comparative Politics, 33(4): 441–461.

Hay, Collin , Michael, Lister and David Marsh (eds.) (2006) The state – theories and issues. Hampshire: Palgrave Macmillan.

Hayek, F A (2006) The constitution of liberty. London: Routledge.

Hepper, Metin (1997) 'Introduction'. In: Hepper, Metin , Ali, Kazancigil and Rockman Bert A (eds.) Institutions and democratic statecraft. Boulder: Westview Press, pp. 3–9.

Herzog, Siegfried (2013) 'Bangladesh 2013 – a year of political crossroads'. Fur Die Freiheit.

Hetherington, Marc J (1998) 'The political relevance of political trust'. The American Political Science Review, 92(4): 791–808.

Hewitt, Vernon (2008) Political mobilisation and democracy in India: States of emergency. Oxford: Routledge.

Hoppe, Hans-Hermann (2007) Democracy: The God that failed. London: Transaction Publishers.

Hoque, Ridwanul (2012) 'Constitutionalism and the Judiciary in Bangladesh'. In: Khilnani, Sunil , Raghavan, Vikram , and Thiruvengadam, Arun K. (eds.), Comparative Constitutionalism in South Asia. Oxford: Oxford University press.

Hossain, Akhtar (2000) 'Anatomy of hartal politics in Bangladesh'. Asian Survey, 40(3): 508–529.

Hossain, Golam (1995) 'Bangladesh in 1994: Democracy at risk'. Asian Survey, A survey of Asia in 1994: Part II, 35(2): 171–178.

Hossain, Golam (1996) 'Bangladesh in 1996: Politics of intransigence'. Asian Survey, A Survey of Asia in 1995: Part II, 36(2): 196–203.

Hossain, Kamal (2013) Bangladesh: Quest for freedom and justice. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Hossain, Maneeza (2006) 'Countdown to elections: High stakes for Bangladesh'. White Paper, (July). Washington DC: Foundation for Defense of Democracies.

Hossain, Maneeza (2007) 'Bangladesh 2007: The new order and Islamism'. White Paper, (Spring). Washington, DC: Hudson Institute.

Hossain, Maneeza and Curtis, Lisa (2010) 'Bangladesh: Checking Islamist extremism in a pivotal democracy'. Backgrounder, Issue No. 2383 (15 March). Washington, DC: The Heritage Foundation.

Hossain, Sara and Alam, Tanjibul (2006) 'Separation of the judiciary from the executive in Bangladesh'. UNDP Policy Paper, Bangladesh. Dhaka: UNDP Policy Paper (26 November).

Hsin-chi, Kuan (1991) 'Power dependence and democratic transition: The case of Hong Kong'. The China Quarterly, 128: 774–793.

Huber, Evelyn , Rueschemeyer, Dietrich and Stephens, John D (1997) 'The paradoxes of contemporary democracy: Formal, participatory, and social dimensions'. Comparative Politics, 29(3): 323–342.

Huda, Nurul (2006) 'Caretaker government in an apprehensive polity'. The Daily Star, (4 November).

Huda, Nurul (2011) 'Behind the caretaker controversy' The Daily Star, (18 June).

Hughes, Kirsty (2007) 'Bangladesh: Moving towards or away from Democracy?' Economic and Political Weekly, 42(15): 1329–1331.

Human Rights Watch (2008) 'Human Rights in Bangladesh'.

Human Rights Watch (2009) 'Human Rights in Bangladesh'.

Human Rights Watch (2012) 'Human Rights in Bangladesh'.

Human Rights Watch (2014) 'Bangladesh: Elections scarred by violence. Government and opposition responsible for abuses before, during, after polls'.

Huntington, Samuel P (1991) The third wave: Democratization in the late twentieth century. Norman: University of Oklahoma Press.

Huq, Aziz Z (2006) 'Democratic norms, human rights and states of emergency: Lessons from the experience of four countries'. In: Democracy, conflict and human society. Stockholm: International Institute for Democracy and Electoral Assistance.

Huque, Ahmed Shafiqul and Hakim, Muhammad A (1993) 'Elections in Bangladesh: Tools of legitimacy'. Asian Affairs, 19(4): 248–261.

Hutchinson, Annan C and Colon-Rios, Joel (2007) 'What's democracy got to do with it? A critique of liberal constitutionalism'. CPL Research Paper, 3(4): 1–49.

Hye, Hasnat Abdul (ed.) (2000) Governance: South Asian perspectives. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Ibrahim, Syed Muhammad (2011) Misrokothon. Dhaka: Ananna.

Ikram, S M and Spear, Percival (1955) The cultural heritage of Pakistan. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Imam, Husain (2008) 'Is the train on the right track?' The Daily Star, (25 August).

Inglehart, R (1997) Modernization and postmodernization: Cultural, economic and political change in 43 societies. Princeton: Princeton University Press.

Ingram, David (2010) Habermas, introduction and analysis. Ithaca: Cornell University Press.

Inoguchi, T , Newman, E and Keane, J , Newman, E and Keane, J (1998) 'Introduction: The changing nature of democracy'. In: Inoguchi, T , Newman, E and Keane, J (eds.) The changing nature of democracy. Tokyo, New York, Paris: United Nations University Press, pp. 1–19.

Institute of Governance Studies, BRAC University (2006) State of governance in Bangladesh.

Institute of Governance Studies, BRAC University (2008) State of governance in Bangladesh.

Institute of Governance Studies, BRAC University (2009) State of governance in Bangladesh.

Institute of Governance Studies, BRAC University (2010) Governance Barometer Survey Bangladesh.

International Crisis Group (2009) 'Bangladesh: Getting Police reform on track'. (Report no. 182 – 11 December) p.14.

International Crisis Group (2015) Asia Report No. 264, 'Mapping Bangladesh's Political Crisis', p. 9, (9 February).

'Invisible force working within CTG '. (2001) The Bangladesh Observer, (11 August).

Islam, Ashraful (2014) 'Rights groups demand disbanding of RAB'. Deutsche Welle (29 May).

Islam, Kazi Nazrul (2014 – originally published in 1364 Bengali year) Sanchita. Dhaka: Bangla Academy.

Islam, M Nazrul (2011) 'Two decades of democracy in Bangladesh (1991–2010): Disillusionment with practice'. Berkeley Journal of Social Sciences, 1(3): 1–26.

Islam, M Shirajul (2008) 'Bangladesh at crossroads'. The Daily Star, (13 September).

Islam, Mahmudul (2005) 'Rule of law in Bangladesh'. Syed Ishtiaque Ahmed Memorial Foundation Lecture 2005. Dhaka: Asiatic Society.

Islam, Md. Shafiqul (2009) The effort of the non-party caretaker government to make the ninth parliamentary elections in 2008 in Bangladesh free, fair and credible. Lunds: Lunds Universitet (Unpublished Master programme research paper).

Islam, Nurul (2003) Making of a nation: Bangladesh: an economists tale. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Islam, Rafiqul (1992) Bangladesh: shamorik shashon o gonotontre shongkot. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Islam, Syed Serajul (1984) 'The State in Bangladesh under Zia (1975–1981)'. Asian Survey, 24(5): 556–573.

Islam, Syed Serajul (1992) 'Bengal legislative assembly and constitutional development'. In: Sirajul Islam (ed.), History of Bangladesh 1704–1971. Volume one: Political history. Dhaka: Asiatic Society of Bangladesh.

Islam, Syed Manzoorul (1994) Essays on Ekushey: The language movement 1952. Dhaka: Bangla Academy.

Islam, Sirajul (1979) The permanent settlement in Bengal: A study of its operation. Dacca: Bangla Academy.

Issacharoff, Samuel (2004) 'Constitutionalizing democracy in fractured societies'. Public Law & Legal Theory Working Paper Group, 04–72. 32 pp.

Jacobs, Jane (1992) Systems of survival: A dialogue on the moral foundations of commerce and politics. New York: Random House.

Jacobson, Arthur J and McCormick John P (2005) 'The business of democracy is democracy'. International Journal of Constitutional Law, 3(4): 706–722.

Jahan, Rounaq (1972) Pakistan: Failure in national integration. New York: Columbia University Press.

Jahan, Rounaq (1973) 'Bangladesh in 1972: Nation-building in a new state'. Asian Survey, 13(2):200.

Jahan, Rounaq (ed.) (2002) Bangladesh: Promise and performance. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Jahan, Rounaq (2004) 'Bangladesh in 2003: Vibrant democracy or destructive politics?' Asian Survey, 44(1): 56–61.

Jahan, Rounaq (2005) Bangladesh Politics: Problems and issues. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Jahan, Rounaq (2007) 'Bangladesh at crossroads'. Paper presented at Experiments with democracy, a symposium on the Asian experience with democracy, (August).

Jahan, Rounaq (2012) 'The parliament of Bangladesh: Challenges and way forward'. The Daily Star (3 June).

Jahan, Rounaq (2014) 'The state of democracy in Bangladesh'. Dhaka Tribune, (23–25 June).

Jahangir, B K (2002) Nationalism, fundamentalism and democracy in Bangladesh. Dhaka: International Centre for Bengal Studies.

Jalal, Ayesha (1995) Democracy and authoritarianism in South Asia: A comparative and historical perspective. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Jamil, Ishtiaq , Askvik, Steinar , Dhakal, Tek Nath (Eds.) (2013) In search of better governance in South Asia and beyond. New York: Springer.

Joehnk, Tom Felix (2014) 'Sham election set dangerous standard for Bangladesh'. East Asia Forum, (09 February).

Kafaltiya, Anand Ballabh (2003) Democracy and election laws. New Delhi: Deep & Deep Publications Pvt. Limited.

Kahn-Freund, Otto (1974) 'On the uses and misuses of comparative law'. The Modern Law Review, 37(1):1–20.

Kamal, Mahbub and Hossain, Mokammel (2011) 'Tin ghontay pash korechen, chchoi ghontay batil korun – Dr. Kamal Hossain'. The Daily Jugantor (9 July): 5.

Kang, Michael (2006) 'De-rigging elections: Direct democracy and the future of redistricting reform'. Public Law and Legal Theory Research Paper Series, 06–22: 46 pp. Atlanta: Emory University School of Law.

Kaplan, Robert D (1997) 'Was democracy just a moment?' The Atlantic Monthly, (December).

Karim, Abdul (1985) A social history of the Muslims in Bengal (down to 1538 AD). Chittagong: Baitush Sharaf Islamic Research Institute.

Karim, Fariha (2011) 'Bangladeshi force trained by UK police allowed to kill and torture'. The Guardian, (10 May).

Karim, Waresul (2004) Election under a caretaker government. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Karsten, Frank and Beckman, Karel (2012) Beyond democracy. London: CreateSpace Independent Publishing Platform.

Kawsar, A B M Reazul Kabir (2012) Bangladesh Nirbachon (1947–2012). Dhaka: Bangladesh Election Research Centre.

Keane, John (2009) The life and death of democracy. London: Pocket Books.

Keay, John (2010) India, a history: From the earliest civilization to the boom of the twenty-first century. London: Harper Press.

Kelly, Judith G (2012) Monitoring democracy: When international election observation works, and why it often fails. Princeton: Princeton University Press.

Kelly, Thomas (2014) 'Apples to oranges: Epistemological dissonance in the human rights case Hadijatou Mani v Niger'. Quinnipiac Law Review, 32:311– 333.

Khan, A A (2015) 'The politics of constitutional amendments in Bangladesh: The case of the non-political caretaker government'. International Review of Law, 9: 14.

Khan, Ali (1997) 'A theory of universal democracy'. Wisconsin International Law Journal, 16(1): 61–113.

Khan, Borhanuddin (2012) 'Necessity of a non-party caretaker government'. The Daily Star, (11 February).

Khan, Hamid (2009) Constitutional and political history of Pakistan. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Khan, M Hafizuddin (2012) 'The Daily Star's wish list: A far cry'. The Daily Star (20 February).

Khan, Qamar-ud-Din (1982) Political concepts in the Quran. Lahore: Islamic Book Foundation.

Khan, Shamsul I , Islam, S Aminul and Haque, M Imdadul (eds.) (2008) Political culture, political parties and the democratic transition in Bangladesh. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Khan, Sonia Zaman (2009) 'Let justice prevail: Law & war crimes in Bangladesh'. BanglaCarta21 Seminar Report. Seminar held in the House of Lords UK on 19 June 2009.

Khan, Sonia Zaman (2015) Democratic transition and the Caretaker Government of Bangladesh in a culture of mistrust. Unpublished doctoral thesis, London: SOAS.

Khan, Zillur R (1981) 'Politicization of Bangladesh military: A response to perceived shortcomings of civilian government'. Asian Survey, 21(5): 551–564.

Khan, Zillur R (1985) 'Islam and Bengali nationalism'. Asian Survey, 25(8): 834–851.

Khan, Zillur R (1993) 'Bangladesh in 1992: Dilemmas of democratization'. Asian Survey, A Survey of Asia in 1992: Part II, 33(2): 150–156.

Khan, Zillur R (1994) 'Bangladesh in 1993: Values, identity and development'. Asian Survey, A Survey of Asia in 1993: Part II, 34(2): 160–167.

Khan, Zillur R (1997) 'Bangladesh's experiments with parliamentary democracy'. Asian Survey, 37(6): 575–589.

Khan, Zillur R (2007) 'Aspirations and realities: Parliaments and the democratic culture'. In: Syed Saad Andaleeb (ed.) Political culture in Bangladesh: Perspectives and analyses: Selections from the Journal of Bangladesh Studies. Dhaka: University Press Limited. pp. 149–184.

Khan, Zillur R and Andaleeb, Syed Saad (eds.) (2011) Democracy in Bangladesh: Political dimensions of national development. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Khandaker, A K (2014) Bhetore Baire. Dhaka: Prothoma Prokashon.

Khatib, A L (1981) Who killed Mujib? New Delhi: Vikas Publishing House (Pvt.) Ltd.

Khosru, Israfil (2012) 'The caretaker ordeal and a nation divided'. New Age, (7 October).

Kirschke, Linda (2000) 'Informal repression, zero-sum politics and late third wave transitions'. The Journal of Modern African Studies, 38(3): 383–405.

Klingemann, Hans-Dieter and Fuchs, Dieter (eds.) (1998) Citizens and the state. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Klug, Francesca, Starmer, Keir and Weir Stuart (1996) The three pillars of liberty: Political rights and freedoms in the United Kingdom (Democratic audit of the United Kingdom). London: Routledge.

Klug, Heinz (2007) 'Constitution-making, democracy and the civilizing of unreconcilable conflict: What might we learn from the South African Miracle?' Legal Studies Research Paper Series, 1046 (May). Madison: University of Wisconsin Law School.

Kochanek, Stanley (1996) 'The rise of interest politics in Bangladesh'. Asian Survey, 36(7): 704–722.

Kochanek, Stanley (1997) 'Bangladesh in 1996: The 25th year of independence'. Asian Survey, A Survey of Asia in 1996: Part II, 37(2): 136–142.

Kochanek, Stanley (1998) 'Bangladesh in 1997: The honeymoon is over'. Asian Survey, A Survey of Asia in 1997: Part II, 38(2): 135–141.

Kochanek, Stanley (2000) 'Governance, patronage politics, and democratic transition in Bangladesh'. Asian Survey, 40(3): 530–550.

Kochanek, Stanley (2010) 'Corruption and the criminalization of politics in South Asia'. In: Brass, Paul R (ed.) (2013) Routledge handbook of South Asian politics: India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, and Nepal. London: Routledge, 364–380.

Kohli, Atul (ed.) (2001) The success of India's democracy (Contemporary South Asia). Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Kothari, Rajni (2007) Rethinking democracy. London: Zed Books.

Kramer, Gudrun (1993) 'Islamist notions of democracy'. Middle East Report, Political Islam, 183(Jul–Aug): 2–8.

Krisch, Nico (2010) Beyond constitutionalism: The Pluralist Structure of Postnational Law. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Kugler, Jacek and Feng, Yi (1999) 'Explaining and modelling democratic transitions'. The Journal of Conflict Resolution, 43(2): 139–146.

Kukreja, Veena and Singh, Mahendra Prasad (2008) Democracy, development and discontent in South Asia. New Delhi: SAGE Publications Pvt. Ltd.

Kumar, Anand (2007) 'A blow to dynastic politics in Bangladesh'. Institute for Defence Studies and Analysis, New Delhi, India, (6 November).

Kumar, Sanjay (2014) 'For Bangladesh, elections bring little relief'. The Diplomat, (08 January).

Kumar Venkatesh, B (2009) Electoral reforms in India: Current discourses. New Delhi: Rawat Publications.

Kumaraswamy PR and Datta, Sreeradha (2007) 'Democracy in Bangladesh: from fragility to collapse?' Strategic Insight, E-journal published by the Department of national Security Affairs Center for Contemporary Conflict at the Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, CA, (No ISSN available), 6(4): 4 pp.

Kundu, Indrajit and Saha, Nirmal and Kumar (2001) 'Democracy-development debate in Bangladesh: An analysis of some relevant issues'. Chittagong University Journal of Law, 6: 160–181.

Kuper, Andrew (2006) Democracy beyond border: Justice and representation in global institutions. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Kurlantzick, Joshua (2013) Democracy in retreat: The revolt of the middle class and the worldwide decline of representative government. New Haven: Yale University Press.

Lai, Brian and Melkonian-Hoover, Ruth (2005) 'Democratic progress and regress: The effects of parties on the transitions of states to and away from democracy'. Political Research Quarterly, 58(4): 551–564.

Laslett, Peter (ed.) (1988) Locke: Two treatises of government. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Lau, Martin (2006) The role of Islam in the legal system of Pakistan. Leiden/Boston: Martinus Nijhoff Publishers.

LeDuc, Lawrence, Niemi, Richard G and Norris, Pippa (eds.) (2010) Comparing democracies: Elections and voting in the 21st century. London: Sage Publications (Pvt.) Ltd.

Lee, Junhan (2002) 'Primary causes of Asian democratization: Dispelling conventional myths'. Asian Survey, 42(6): 821–837.

Legrand, Pierre (1997), 'The impossibility of legal transplants'. 4 Maastricht Journal of European and Comparative Law, 111–124.

Levey, Geogrey Brahm and Modood, Tariq (eds.) (2009) Secularism, religion and multicultural citizenship. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Levi, Margaret (1997) Consent, dissent, and patriotism. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Levin, Michael (1992) The spectre of democracy. The rise of modern democracy as seen by its critics. New York: Washington Square Press.

Lienesch, Michael (1992) 'Response: Response to Mueller's "democracy and Ralph's pretty good grocery: Election, equality, and the minimal human being": Wo(e) begon(e) democracy'. American Journal of Political Science, 36(4): 1004–1014.

Lifschultz, Lawrence (1979) Bangladesh: The unfinished revolution. London: Zed Books.

Lijphart, Arend (1977) Democracy in plural societies: A comparative exploration. New Haven: Yale University Press.

Lijphart, Arend (1999) Patterns of democracy: Government forms and performance in thirty-six countries. New Haven: Yale University Press.

Lindberg, Staffan I (ed.) (2009) Democratization by elections: A new mode of transition. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press.

Lindeman, Eduard C (1938) 'A summary statement of unifying influences in a democracy'. The Public Opinion Quarterly, Special Supplement: Public Opinion in a Democracy, 2(1): 94–96.

Linz, Juan J and Stepan, Alfred (1996) Problems of democratic transition and consolidation. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press.

Lipset, Seymour Martin (1963) Political man: The social bases of politics. New York: Anchor Books.

Liton, Shakhawat (2012a) 'Full judgment vs short order'. The Daily Star, (19 September).

Liton, Shakhawat (2012b) 'Political culture key obstacle to fair polls'. The Daily Star, (29 September).

Liton, Shakhawat and Hasan, Rashidul (2011) 'Caretaker system abolished: Js passes constitution's 15th amendment bill amid BNP's absence'. The Daily Star, (01 July).

Liton, Shakhawat and Sarkar, Ashutosh (2012a) 'Caretaker system can still be legal' The Daily Star, (12 February).

Liton, Shakhawat and Sarkar, Ashutosh (2012b) 'Not all judges ruled it illegal'. The Daily Star, (17 September).

Locke, John (1740) The works of John Locke. 4th ed. London: E. Parker.

Lokken, Roy N (1959) 'The concept of democracy in colonial political thought'. The William and Mary Quarterly, 3rd Ser., 16(4): 568–580.

Lombardi, Clark B (2010) 'Can Islamizing a legal system ever help promote liberal democracy? A view from Pakistan'. University of St. Thomas Law Journal, 7(3): 649–691.

Lorch, Jasmin (2014) 'Elections in Bangladesh: Political conflict and the problem of credibility'. E-International Relations (2 February).

Ludden, David (ed.) (1996) Contesting the nation: Religion, community and the politics of democracy in India (South Asia Seminar Series). University Park: University of Pennsylvania Press.

Ludden, David (ed.) (2011) 'The politics of independence in Bangladesh'. Economic and Political Weekly, 36(35): 79–85.

Luhmann, Niklas (1979) Trust and power. New York: John Wiley and Sons.

Lukes, Steven (2004) Power: A radical view. New York: Palgrave Macmillan.

McCann, Bryan (2008) The throes of democracy. Brazil since 1989. London: Zed Books.

McCarthy, Thomas (1998) 'Legitimacy and diversity: Dialectical reflections on analytical distinctions'. In: Rosenfeld, Michel and Arato, Andrew (eds.) (1998) Habermas on Law and Democracy: Critical Exchanges (Philosophy, Social Theory & the Rule of Law). Berkley: University of California Press. pp. 115–153.

MacLean, James (2012) Rethinking law as process: Creativity, novelty, change. Oxford: Routledge.

Macpherson, C B (1965) The real world of democracy. Toronto: Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Machiavelli, N (1513) The prince. Translated by Skinner, Q and Price, R (1988). Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Madsen, Stig Toft, Nielsen, Kenneth Bo, and Skoda, Uwe (eds.) (2012) Trusts with democracy: Political practice in South Asia. Delhi: Anthem Press.

Magagna, Victor V (1991) Communities of grain: Rural rebellion in comparative perspective. Ithaca: Cornell University Press.

Mahmud, Tarek and Islam, Mohammed Serajul, (2017) 'Explosives in Sylhet attack were time bombs' Dhaka Tribune (27 March).

Mainwaring, Scott, O'Donnell, G and Valenzuela, J Samuel (eds.) (1992) Issues in democratic consolidation: The new South American democracies in comparative perspective. Notre Dame: University of Notre Dame Press.

Malik, Iftikhar H (1996) 'State and civil society in Pakistan: From crisis to crisis'. Asian Survey, 36(7): 673–690.

Maloy, J S (2009) 'The Aristotelianism of Locke's politics'. Journal of the History of Ideas, 70(2): 235–257.

Mandaville, Peter (2007) Global political Islam. Oxford: Routledge.

Mani, Rama (2006) 'Under-estimating the enemy and over-estimating ourselves? The quest for balance between democracy and security in the fight against terrorism'. Paper presented at the Sixth International Conference for New or Restored Democracies, Doha (30 October–1 November). 20 pp. Geneva: Geneva Center for Security Policy.

Maniruzzaman, Talukdar (1976) 'Bangladesh in 1975: The fall of the Mujib regime and its aftermath'. Asian Survey, A survey of Asia in 1975: Part II, 16(2): 119–129.

Maniruzzaman, Talukdar (1992) 'The fall of the military dictator: 1991 elections and the prospect of civilian rule in Bangladesh'. Pacific Affairs, 65(2)(Summer): 203–224.

Manisha, M and Mitra Deb, Sharmila (eds.) (2009) Indian democracy: problems and prospects. New Delhi: Anthem Press India.

Mann, Michael (1988) States, war and capitalism. New York: Basil Blackwell.

Manna, Mahmudur Rahman (2015) 'What a farce!' The Daily Star, (07 January).

Mansbridge, Jane J (1980) Beyond adversary democracy. New York: Basic Books.

March, J W and Olsen, J P (1989) Rediscovering institutions. New York: Free Press.

March, J W and Olsen, J P (1995) Democratic governance. New York: Free Press.

Markell, Parchen (2006) 'The rule of the people: Arendt, Arche, and democracy'. The American Political Science Review, 100(1): 1–14.

Markoff, John (1996) Waves of democracy: Social movements and political change. Thousand Oaks: Pine Forge Press.

Markovitz, Irving Leonard (1999) 'Constitutions, the federalist papers, and the transition to democracy'. In: Lisa Anderson (ed.) Transitions to democracy. New York: Columbia University Press, pp. 42–71.

Marmor, Andrei (2003) 'Authority, equality and democracy'. (January). Public Policy Research Paper Series, 03–15. 34 pp. Los Angeles: University of Southern California Law School.

Marshall, Charles B (1959) 'Reflections on a revolution in Pakistan'. Foreign Affairs, 37(2): 247–256.

Mascarenhas, Anthony (1971) The rape of Bangladesh. New Delhi: Vikas Publication.

Mascarenhas, Anthony (1986) Bangladesh: A legacy of blood. New York: Arnold Overseas.

Masud, Kazi Anwarul (2007) Bangladesh crisis. Dhaka: Salma Masud.

May, Christopher (2014) The rule of law: The common sense of global politics. Cheltenham: Edward Elgar Publishing Ltd.

Mayo, H B (1962) 'How can we justify democracy'. The American Political Science Review, 56(3): 555–566.

Mehdi, Rubya , Petersen, Hanne and Reenberg Erik (eds.) (2008) Law and religion in multicultural societies. Copenhagen: DJOF Publishing.

Meisburger, Tim (2012) 'Strengthening democracy in Bangladesh'. The Asia Foundation, (Occasional paper no. 13, June). Dhaka: Asia Foundation, Bangladesh.

Mejfa, Daniel and Posada, Carlos Esteban (2005) 'Populist policies in the transition to democracy'. (November). 40 pp.

Mendis, Dushyantha (ed.) (2008) Electoral processes and governance in South Asia. London: Sage Publications Ltd.

Menski, W and B. Chanda (eds.) (2005) 'Cancer of extremism in Bangladesh'. Proceedings of the European Human Rights Conference on Bangladesh extremism, intolerance & violence. London: Centre for Ethnic Minority Studies, SOAS and Bangladesh Conference Steering Committee.

Menski, Werner (2003) Hindu law: Beyond tradition and modernity. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Menski, Werner (2006) Comparative law in a global context: The legal systems of Asia and Africa. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Menski, Werner (2009–2010) 'Flying kites in Pakistan: Turbulences in theory and practice'. Journal of Law and Social Research (Multan, Pakistan), 1(1): 41–57.

Menski, Werner (2010a) 'Fuzzy law and the boundaries of secularism.' Potchefstroom Electronic Law Journal, (ISSN 1727–3781), 13(3): 29–52.

Menski, Werner (2010b) 'Hindu law'. Law & Justice. The Christian Law Review, 164 (Hilary/Easter): 45–62.

Menski, Werner (2010c) 'Law, State and culture: How countries accommodate religious, cultural and ethnic diversity. The British and Indian experiences'. In: Marie-Claire Foblets , Jean-Francois Gaudreault-Desbiens and Alison Dundes Renteln (eds.) Cultural diversity and the law. State responses from around the world. Brussels: Bryllant and Editions Yvon Blais, 403–446.

Menski, Werner (2011a) 'Flying kites in a global sky: new models of jurisprudence'. Socio-Legal Review, 7: 1–22.

Menski, Werner (2011b) 'Flying kites: Managing family laws and gender issues in Bangladesh'. Stamford Journal of Law, 2 (March): 109–134.

Menski, Werner (2012a) 'Jürgen Habermas: Post-conflict reconstruction, non-hegemonic modernity, discourse about spaces and the role of religion'. In: Pradip Basu (ed.) Modern social thinkers. Kolkata: Setu Prokashani, 180–198.

Menski, Werner (2012b) 'Law, religion and democracy: The Indian experience'. In: Giovanni Filorama (ed.) Religioni e modernita. Torino: Giulio Einaudi Editore.

Menski, Werner (2012c) 'Plural worlds of law and the search for living law'. In: Werner Gephart (ed.) Rechtsanalyse als kulturforschung. Frankfurt and main: Vittorio Klostermann, 71–88.

Menski, Werner (2014) 'The liquidity of law as a challenge to global theorising'. Jura Gentium, Vol. XI: Pluralismo Guiridico. Annuale 2014, 19–42

Merriam, Charles E (1941) 'The meaning of democracy'. The Journal of Negro Education, 10(3): 309–317.

Metcalf, Barbara D and Metcalf, Thomas R (eds.) (2001) A concise history of modern India. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Michelutti, Lucia (2008) The vernacularisation of democracy: Politics, caste and religion in India. Hyderabad: Routledge India.

Midlarsky, Manus I (1998) 'Democracy and Islam: Implications for civilizational conflict and the democratic peace'. International Studies Quarterly, 42(3): 485–511.

Miller, Arthur (1974) 'Political issues and trust in government: 1964–70'. The American Political Science Review , 68(3): 951–972.

Miller, Joseph Dana (1915) 'The difficulties of democracy'. International Journal of Ethics, 25(2): 213–225.

Mishra, Pankaj (2012) From the ruins of empire: The revolt against the west and the remaking of Asia. London: Penguin Books Ltd.

Mitchell, Kate L (1943) 'India today and tomorrow'. Political Affairs, 16(2): 185–188.

Moaddel, Mansoor (2002) 'The study of Islamic culture and politics'. Annual Review of Sociology, 28: 359–386.

Mohan, C Raja (2007) 'Balancing interests and values: India's struggle with democracy promotion'. The Washington Quarterly, 30(3):99–115.

Mohiuddin, Yasmeen (2008) 'Sheikh Hasina and Khaleda Zia: Bangladesh's military is desperate to bring down these two former leaders: and it's dragging the whole country down with them'. International Journal, 63(2): 461–468.

Molla, Gyasuddin (2000) 'Democratic institution building process in Bangladesh: South Asian experience of a new model of a care taker government in a parliamentary framework'. Heidelberg Papers in South Asian and comparative politics, Working Paper no. 3. South Asia Institute, Department of Political Science, University of Heidelberg, (December).

Momen, Mehnaaz (2009) 'Bangladesh in 2008: Déjà vu again or a return to democracy?' Asian Survey, 49(1): 66–73.

Momen, Mehnaaz (2010) 'Bangladesh in 2009: The peril within'. Asian Survey, 50(1): 157–163.

Monibot, George (2004) 'A thousand dusty codicils filed under: law & order protest; Little by little, democracy is being banned', The Guardian, (3 August).

Mookherjee, Nayanika (2006) "'Remembering to forget": Public secrecy and memory of sexual violence in the Bangladesh war of 1971', Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute, (N.S)12: 433–450.

Moore Jr. Barrington , (1966) Social origins of dictatorship and democracy. Lord and peasant in the making of the modern world. Boston: Beacon Press.

Morison, John (2008) In: Cane, Peter and Conaghan, Joanne (eds.) The Oxford companion to law. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Morlino, Leonardo (2002) 'What is a "good" democracy? Theory and empirical analysis'. Lecture delivered at the conference on 'The European Union Nations State, and the quality of democracy. Lessons from Southern Europe'. University of California, Berkeley, October 31–November 2. 44 pp.

Morrison, Wayne (2005) Jurisprudence: from the Greeks to post-modernism. London: Cavendish Publishing Limited.

Moskos Jr. Charles C and Bell, Wendell (1964) 'Attitudes towards democracy among leaders in four emergent nations'. The British Journal of Sociology, 15(4): 317–337.

'Most people satisfied with government ' (2014). The Bangladesh Chronicle, (31 August).

Moten, A Rashid (1979) 'Varieties of instability: A theoretical and methodological critique'. Journal of Modern African Studies, 17(4): 703–709.

Mueller, Denis C (1996) Perspectives on public choice: A handbook. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Muhith, A M A (1992) Bangladesh: Emergence of a nation. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Mukerjee, Hiren (1958) Gandhiji: A study. Delhi: National Book Agency.

Mukherjee, Rudrangshu (2014) Nehru & Bose: Parallel lives. New Delhi: Viking (India).

Muller, Edward N and Seligson, Mitchell A (1994) 'Civic culture and democracy: the question of causal relationships'. The American Political Science Review, 88(3): 635–652.

Munck, Gerardo L (1994) 'Democratic transitions in comparative perspective'. Comparative Politics, 26(April): 355–375.

Munck, Gerardo L and Leff, Carol Kalnik (1999) 'Modes of transition and democratization: South America and Eastern Europe in comparative perspective'. In: Lisa Anderson (ed.) Transitions to democracy. New York: Columbia University Press, 193–216.

Muro, Diego , Alonso, Gregorio (eds.) (2011) The politics and memory of democratic transition: The Spanish model. New York: Routledge.

Mushrafi, Mokhdum-E-Mulk and Rahaman, Hasibur (2009) Bangladesh politics and governance. Dhaka: Mowla Brothers.

Nahar, Sultana (2005) People, politics and religion: Communalism in Bangladesh and India. Dhaka: Pathak Shomabesh.

Naik, Rineeta (2007) 'Bangladesh: The caretaker's burden'. Economic and Political Weekly, 42(35): 3540–3542.

Nasstrom, Sofia (2007) 'The legitimacy of the people'. Political Theory, 35(5): 624–658.

Nazrul, Asif (2012) 'Politicians.., if not the court'. The Daily Star, (30 September).

Nehru, J (1936) Jawaharlal Nehru: An autobiography with musings on recent events in India . Publisher: John Lane The Bodley Head.

Neocleous, Mark (1995) 'From civil society to social'. British Journal of Sociology, 46(3): 395–408.

Newman, Janet and Clarke, John (2010) Publics, politics and power: Remaking the public in public services. London: Sage Publications (Pvt.) Ltd.

Norris, Pippa (2005) 'Stable democracy and good governance in divided societies: Do power sharing institutions work?' Faculty research working paper series, RWP05-014 (February). Harvard University: John F. Kennedy School of Government, 41.

Nussbaum, Martha and Myers, Joanne J (2004) Electoral engineering: Voting rules and political behaviour. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Nussbaum, Martha and Myers, Joanne J (2008) The clash within: Democracy, religious violence, and India's future. Cambridge: Harvard University Press.

Ober, Josiah (2008) Democracy & knowledge: Innovation & learning in classical Athens. Princeton and Oxford: Princeton University Press.

Odhikar (2014/2015) Annual Human Rights Report on Bangladesh. Dhaka, Bangladesh.

O'Donnell, G, Schmitter, Phillippe C and Whitehead, Lawrence (1986) Transitions from authoritarian rule: Tentative conclusions about uncertain democracies: Prospects for democracy. Baltimore: Johns Hopkins University Press.

O'Flynn, Ian (2006) Deliberative democracy and divided societies. Edinburgh: Edinburgh University Press.

Oliver, Dawn and Fusaro, Carlo (2011) How constitutions change: A comparative study. Oxford: Hart Publishing.

Olson, Kevin (2007) 'Paradoxes of constitutional democracy'. American Journal of Political Science, 51(2): 330-343.

Opello Jr., Walter C and Rosow, Stephen J (1999) The nation state and global order: A historical introduction to contemporary politics. Boulder: Lynne Rienner Publishers.

Oppenheimer, Daniel M and Edwards, Michael A (2012) Democracy despite itself: Why a system that shouldn't work at all works so well. Cambridge: MIT Press.

Osborne, Roger (2011) Of the people, by the people: A new history of democracy. London: The Bodley Head.

Pakistan Institute of Legislative Development and Transparency (2005) Background paper, free, fair and credible elections in Pakistan. Islamabad.

Pakistan Institute of Legislative Development and Transparency (2006) Background paper, Caretaker government during election: A comparative study of Pakistan, Bangladesh and India. Islamabad.

Pakistan Institute of Legislative Development and Transparency (2007) Background paper, Required electoral reforms before general election 2007/2008. Islamabad.

Paley, Julia (2002) 'Towards an anthropology of democracy'. Annual Review of Anthropology, 31: 469-496.

Palmer, Parker J. (2011) Healing the heart of democracy: The courage to create a politics worthy of human spirit. San Francisco: Jossey-Bass.

Park, Richard L (1975) 'Political crisis in India, 1975'. Asian Survey, 15(11): 996-1113.

Parens, Joshua (1994) 'Whose liberalism? Which Islam? Leonard Binder's "Islamic liberalism"'. Political Science and Politics, 27(3): 514-515.

Parnini, Sayeda (2014) 'Democracy's no-show at Bangladesh's elections'. East Asia Forum, (09 February).

Pattanaik, Smruti S (2006) 'The neutral caretaker government interregnum in Bangladesh'. Institute for Defence Studies and Analysis, New Delhi, (9 November).

Pattaro, Enrico (2005) 'An overview on practical reason in Aquinas'. Scandinavian Studies in Law, 48: 251-267.

Paxton, Pamela (2002) 'Social capital and democracy: An interdependent relationship'. American Sociological Review, 67(2): 254-277.

Pearl, David and Menski, Werner (1998) Muslim family law. London: Sweet & Maxwell.

Pellegrini, Lorenzo and Gerlagh, Reyer (2005) 'An empirical contribution to the debate on corruption, democracy and environmental policy'. FEEM (Fondazione Eni Enrico Mattei) Working Paper No. 08.05, (January): 27 pp.

Peters, Rudolph and Bearman, Peri (2014) The Ashgate research companion to Islamic Law. London: Ashgate.

Piliavsky, Anastasia (ed.) (2014) Patronage as politics in South Asia. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Pitkin, Hanna Fenichel (1967) The concept of representation. Berkeley: University of California Press.

Pocock, J G A (1987) The ancient constitution and the feudal law: A study of English historical thought in the seventeenth century. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Polanyi, Karl (1944) The Great Transformation. New York: Farrar and Rinehart.

Ponser, Richard A (2003) Law, pragmatism and democracy. Cambridge: Harvard University Press.

Potter, David , Goldblatt, David , Kiloh, Margaret and Lewis, Paul (eds.) (2010) Democratization. Cambridge: Polity Press.

Powell, Arvil (ed.) (2011) 'Special issue: Knowledge, pedagogy and Muslims in colonial north-west India'. South Asia Research, 31(1) (February).

Powell, G Bingham JR (2000) Elections as instruments of democracy. New Haven and London: Yale University Press.

Power and Participation Research Center, PPRC (2007) Bangladesh governance report: Unbundling governance – indices, institutions, process, solutions. Dhaka: PPRC.

Preece, Alun A (2000) 'Democracy and the military: The role of the military in the evolution and maintenance of democracy'. Paper delivered to the International Conference on The Military and Governance in the Asia-Pacific Region, (27 April). Brisbane: Griffith University.

'President signs ordinance reforming electoral laws' (2001) The Bangladesh Observer, (9 August).

Price, Gareth (2007) 'Bangladesh: Political paralysis'. The World Today, 63(1): 24–25.

Price, Pamela and Engelsen Ruud, Ariid (eds.) (2010) Power and influence in India: Bosses, lords and captains. Hyderabad: Routledge India.

Przeworski, Adam , Susan, C Stokes and Manin, Bernard , Susan, C Stokes and Manin, Bernard (1999) 'Elections and representations'. In: Przeworski, Adam , Susan, C Stokes and Manin, Bernard (eds.) Democracy, accountability and representation. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, pp. 1–54.

Putnam, Robert D (1995) 'Bowling alone: America's declining social capital'. Journal of Democracy, 6: 65–78.

Quigley, Kevin F (1997) 'Political scientists and assisting democracy: Too tenuous links'. Political Science and Politics, 30(3): 564–567.

Qvortrup, Mads (2002) A comparative study of referendums: Government by the people. Manchester: Manchester University Press.

Rabinow, Paul (ed.) (1991) The Foucault reader: An introduction to Foucault's thought. London: Penguin Books.

Raghavan, Srinath (2013) 1971 A global history of the creation of Bangladesh. Cambridge: Harvard University Press.

Rahim, Abdur (1994) The principles of Islamic jurisprudence. New Delhi: Kitab Bhavan.

Rahman, A T R (1974) 'Administration and its political environment in Bangladesh'. Pacific Affairs, 47(2): 171–191.

Rahman, A T Rafiqur (2006) Bangladesh in the mirror: An outsider perspective on a struggling democracy. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Rahman, F (1958) 'Muslim modernism in the Indo-Pakistan sub-continent'. Bulletin of the School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London, 21(1/3):82– 99.

Rahman, Anisur (2011) 'Bangladesh plans to scrap caretaker government system'. Gulf News, (31 May).

Rahman, Fazlur (1970a) 'Islam and the constitutional problem of Pakistan'. Studia Islamica, 32: 275–287.

Rahman, Fazlur (1970b) 'Islam and social justice'. Pakistan Forum, 1(1): 4–5 and 9.

Rahman, Hossain Zillur (2009) 'Unbundling governance'. Lecture at the Institute for Global Leadership, Tufts University, Medford, USA. Dhaka: Power and Participation Research Center.

Rahman, Latifur (2002) The caretaker days and my story. Dhaka: Mullick Brothers.

Rahman, Masihur (2010) Democracy in crisis. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Rahman, Md. Ataur (1983) 'Bangladesh in 1982: Beginnings of the second decade'. Asian Survey, A survey of Asia in 1982: Part II, 23(2): 149–157.

Rahman, Muhammad Habibur (2010) Tattabodhayak shorkarer daibhar. Dhaka: Prothoma Prokashan.

Rahman, Syedur (1990) 'Bangladesh in 1989: Internationalisation of political and economic issues'. Asian Survey, A survey of Asia in 1989: Part II, 30(2): 150–157.

Rahman, Wali-ur (2009) 'An analysis of the Supreme Court judgment of the fifth amendment of the constitution of Bangladesh'. Journal of International Affairs, 13(2) (July–December).

Rahman, Wali-ur (2011) Transition to democracy: Kaleidoscope of a changing world. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Rai, Anil Kumar (1996) Concept of state and fundamental rights. New Delhi: Deep and Deep.

Rainer, Helmut and Siedler, Thomas (2006) 'Does democracy foster trust?' IZA Discussion Paper, (May) 2154. 29 pp. Bonn: Institute for the Study of Labor.

Rajan, Sudhit Chella (2005) 'Is democracy possible, Part II: Cosmopolitan ideas and the problem of global political community'. Presented at the annual meeting of the Western Political Science Association, (16–19 March). 21 pp. Oakland: California, USA.

Rajpal, Shilpi (2015) 'Colonial psychiatry in mid-nineteenth century India: The James Clark Enquiry'. South Asia Research. 35(1).

Ramachandran, Sudha (2014) 'Bangladesh: Democracy in peril: The Hasina–Zia feud threatens to return the country to military rule'. The Diplomat, (07 January).

Ramnath, Kalyani (2012) 'We the people: Seamless webs and social revolution in India's constituent assembly debates'. South Asia Research, 32(1): 57–70.

Ramney, Austin and Kendall, Willmoore (1951) 'Democracy: Confusion and agreement'. The Western Political Quarterly, 4(3): 430–439.

Randeria, Shalini (2006) 'Entangled histories: Civil societies, caste solidarities and legal pluralism in post-colonial India'. In Keane, John (ed.) Civil Society: Berlin perspectives. New York: Berghahn Books, 213–242.

Rashid, Harunur (2001) 'Can a CTG make a policy decision.' Dhaka Courier, 18(4) (17 August): 27.

Rashiduzzaman, M (1994) 'The liberals and the religious right in Bangladesh'. Asian Survey, 34(11): 974–990.

Rashiduzzaman, M (1997) 'Political unrest and democracy in Bangladesh'. Asian Survey, 37(3): 254–268.

Rawls, John (2005) A theory of justice. Cambridge: Harvard University Press.

Ray, James Lee (1995) 'Global trends, state specific factors and regime transitions, 1825–1993'. Journal of Peace Research, 32(1):49– 63.

Rehg, William (1998) 'Against subordination: Morality, discourse, and decision in the legal theory of Jürgen Habermas'. In: Rosenfield, Michel and Arato, Andrew (eds.) Habermas on law and democracy: Critical exchanges. Berkeley: University of California Press, 257–271.

Rejai, Mostafa (1967a) Democracy. The contemporary theories. New York: Atherton Press.

Rejai, Mostafa (1967b) 'The metamorphosis of democratic theory'. Ethics, 77(3): 202–208.

'Restore caretaker govt system' (2011) The Daily Star, (24 August).

Reydams, Luc, Wouters, Jan and Ryngaert, Cedric (eds.) (2012) International Prosecutors. Oxford University Press, 169.

Rhodes, R A W, Binder, Sarah A and Rockman, Bert A. (eds.) (2006) The Oxford handbook of political institutions. New York: Oxford University Press, USA.

Riaz, Ali (2004) 'Bangladesh in 2004: The politics of vengeance and the erosion of democracy'. Asian Survey, 45(1): 112–118.

Riaz, Ali (2006) 'Bangladesh in 2005: Standing at a crossroads'. Asian Survey, 46(1): 107–113.

Riaz, Ali (2010a) Islamic militancy in Bangladesh: A complex web. Oxford and New York: Routledge.

Riaz, Ali (ed.) (2010b) Religion and politics in South Asia. London and New York: Routledge.

Riaz, Ali (2012) 'Inconvenient truths about Bangladeshi politics'. The Daily Star (1 January)

Riaz, Ali (2013a) 'Bangladesh in turmoil: A nation on the brink?' Congressional Testimony before the Subcommittee on Asia and the Pacific Committee on Foreign Affairs, United States House of Representatives, p. 3.

Riaz, Ali (2013b) 'Democracy in Bangladesh: A report card'. South Asia Journal, (Issue 7 – January).

Riaz, Ali (2014a) 'A crisis of democracy in Bangladesh'. Current History, 113(762): 152–153.

Riaz, Ali (2014b) 'Shifting tides in South Asia: Bangladesh's failed election'. Journal of Democracy, 25(2): 119–130.

Riaz, Ali (2015) 'The troubled democracy of Bangladesh: 'Muddling through' or 'a political settlement'? Institute of South Asian Studies (ISAS) Special Report No. 25, 8, (14 July).

Riaz, Ali (2016a) Bangladesh: A political history since independence. London and New York: I.B. Tauris.

Riaz, Ali (2016b) 'What does democracy mean to Bangladeshis?' The Daily Star (6 December).

Riaz, Ali and Fair, Christine C (eds.) (2011) Political Islam and governance in Bangladesh. London and New York: Routledge.

Riker, William H (1965) Democracy in the United States. New York: Colier Macmillan.

Rizvi, Gowher (1991) 'Bangladesh: Towards civil society'. The World Today, 47(8/9): 155–160.

Robinson, Nick and Sattar, Nawreen (2012) 'When corruption is an emergency: "Good governance" coups and Bangladesh'. Fordham International Law Journal, 35: 737–779.

Rosanvallon, Pierre (2007) Democracy: Past and future. New York: Columbia University Press.

Rosenfeld, Michel (2001) 'The rule of law and the legitimacy of constitutional democracy'. Public Law Research Paper, 36 (March). 70 pp. New York: Jacob Burns Institute for Advances Legal Studies, Cardozo Law School.

Rosenfeld, Michel and Arato, Andrew (eds.) (1998) Habermas on law and democracy: Critical exchanges (philosophy, social theory & the rule of law). Berkley: University of California Press.

Rousseau, Jean-Jacques (1980) The social contract. London: Wordsworth.

Roy, Asim (1987) 'The Bengal "cultural mediators" and the Bengal Muslim identity in the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries'. South Asia, 10(1): 11–34.

Rubin, Edward L (2001) 'Getting past democracy'. Public Law and Legal Theory Research Paper Series, 1–4. 64 pp. Philadelphia: University of Pennsylvania Law School.

Rushdie, Salman (1992) The Satanic Verses. Delaware: The Consortium Inc.

Russel, Ralph (1972) 'Strands of Muslim identity in South Asia'. South Asia Review, 6(1): 25.

Rustow, Dankwart A (1970) 'Transitions to democracy: Toward a dynamic model'. Journal of Comparative Politics, (April 1979).

Ruud, Arild Engelsen (2012) in Madsen, Stig Toft, Nielsen, Kenneth Bo and Skoda, Uwe (eds.) Trusts with democracy: Political practice in South Asia (Anthem South Asian Studies). London: Anthem Press, 53–54, 67–68.

Ruud, Arild Engelsen (2014) 'The political bully in Bangladesh'. In: Piliavsky, Anastasia (ed.) Patronage as politics in South Asia. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 304.

Sadiki, Larbi, Wimmen Heiko, Zubaidi Al, Layla (eds.) (2012) Democratic transition in the Middle East: Unmaking power. New York: Routledge.

Sadurski, Wojciech (ed.) (2005) Constitutional theory. Aldershot: Ashgate.

Safi, Michael (2016) 'Indian Court orders cinemas to play national anthem before films'. The Guardian, (30 November).

Sahlins, Marshall (1974) Stone Age economics. London: Tavistock.

Salik, Siddiq (1997) Witness to surrender. New Delhi: Lancer Publishers & Distributors.

Saramago, Jose (2004) 'The least bad system is in need of change: Reinventing democracy'. Le Monde Diplomatique, (August).

Sarker, Jadunath (1977) History of Bengal, Muslim period, 1200–1757. Kolkata: J Prokashan.

Sartori, Giovanni (1987) Theory of democracy revisited. Chatham: Chatham House.

Sattar, Maher (2012) 'Dhaka's death squad shoots for a makeover'. Global Post (29 January).

Saxonhouse, Arlene W (1993) 'Athenian democracy: Modern mythmakers and ancient theorists'. Political Science and Politics, 26(3): 486–490.

Sayeed, Sinha MA (2012) 'Lessons from past non-party caretaker governments and the way forward'. The Financial Express, (7 May).

Schacht, Joseph (1979) The origins of Mohammedan jurisprudence. Oxford: Clarendon Press.

Schacht, Joseph (1984) An introduction to Islamic law. Reprint. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Schaffer, Teresita and Saigal-Arora, Hemani (1999) 'India: A fragmented democracy'. The Washington Quarterly, 22(4): 143–150.

Schendel, Willem van (2009) A history of Bangladesh. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Schmitter, Philippe C and Karl, Terry Lynn (1991) 'What democracy is ... and is not'. Journal of Democracy, 2(3): 76.

Schoenbrod, David (2003) 'Democracy by decree: What happens when courts run government'. Public law and legal theory Research Paper Series, 2: 3–19.

Scholte, Marianne (2014) 'No "Basketcase"'. Development and Cooperation, 41(12):463– 465.

Schopflin, George (2000) Nations, identity, power: The new politics of Europe. London: Hurst & Company.

Schwartz, Paul M (2002) 'Voting technology and democracy'. New York University Law Review, 77: 625–698.

Schwartzberg, Melissa (2004) 'Athenian democracy and legal change'. American Political Science Review, 98(2): 311–325.

Schwartzberg, Melissa (2009) Democracy and legal change. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Sen, Swadhin (2002) 'Community boundary, secularized religion and imagined past in Bangladesh: Archaeology and historiography of unequal encounter'. World Archaeology, 34(2): 346–362.

Sengupta, Nitish (2001) History of the Bengali-speaking people. New Delhi: UBS Publishers' Distributors Pvt. Ltd.

Serajuddin, Alamgir Muhammad (2011) Muslim family law, secular courts and Muslim women in South Asia. Karachi: Oxford University Press.

Serra, Narcis (2010) The military transition: Democratic reform of the armed forces. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Shah, Prakash (2005) 'Globalisation and the challenge of Asian Legal Transplants in Europe'. Singapore Journal of Legal Studies, 348– 361.

Shah, Prakash (2005) Legal pluralism in conflict: Coping with cultural diversity in law. London: Glass House Press.

Shah, Prakash (2014) 'Critiquing the western account of India studies within a comparative science of cultures'. International Journal of Hindu Studies, 18(1):67– 72.

Shain, Yossi, Linz, Juan J. (eds.) (1995a) Between states: Interim governments and democratic transitions. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Shain, Yossi, Linz, Juan J., Linz, Juan J. (eds.) (1995b) 'Introduction: Interim government and their legitimating myths'. In: Shain, Yossi, Linz, Juan J. (eds.) Between states: Interim governments and democratic transitions. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 6–7.

Sharansky, Natan and Dermer, Ron (2006) The case for democracy: The power of freedom to overcome tyranny and terror. New York: Public Affairs.

Sharma, Mohan Lal, Peacock, Olivia and Gopal, Krishnan (2002) Globalisation, democracy and governance in South Asia. New Delhi: Kalinga Publications.

Sharma, Mukul (2007) 'Bangladesh's repressive regime'. Economic and Political Weekly, 42(32): 3294–3295.

Sharma, Shalendra (1999) Development and democracy in India. Boulder: Lynne Rienner Publishers.

Shashtri, Amita, and Wilson, Jeyaratnam A (eds.) (2001) The post- colonial states of South Asia: Democracy, development and identity. New York: Palgrave Macmillan.

Shehabuddin, Elora (2011) 'Bangladeshi civil society and Islamist politics'. In: Riaz, Ali and Fair, Christine C (eds.) (2011) Political Islam and governance in Bangladesh. Oxford: Routledge, 91–114.

Shennan, J H (1974) The origins of the modern European state, 1450–1725. London: Hutchinson.

Siaroff, Alan (2000) 'The fate of centrifugal democracies: Lessons from consociational theory and system performance'. Comparative Politics, 32(3): 317–332.

Siddiqui, Kamal (2006) Towards good governance in Bangladesh: Fifty unpleasant essays. Dhaka: University Press Limited.

Sihag, Balbir S. (2007). 'Kautilya on administration of justice during the fourth century B.C.'. Journal of the History of Economic Thought, 29(3): 359–377.

Singh, Baljit (1964) 'The sources of contemporary political thought in India – A reappraisal'. Ethics, 75(1): 57–62.

Sisson, Richard, and Rose, Leo E (1990) War and secession: Pakistan, India, and the creation of Bangladesh. Berkeley: University of California Press.

Skinner, Q (1978) The foundations of modern political thought, Vol 1: The renaissance. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Skinner, Q (1989) 'State'. In T Ball et al. Political innovation and conceptual change. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Sloss, David (2006) 'Using international law to enhance democracy'. 47 Va. J. Int'l L. 1 2006–2007. Santa Clara Law Digital Commons. Santa Clara University.

Sobhan, Rehman (2012) 'Bangladesh at 40: Looking back and moving forward'. The Daily Star (2 January).

Sobhan, Zafar (2006) 'Conspiracy theories in Bangladesh'. Economic and Political Weekly, 41(30): 3275–3276.

Sobhan, Zafar (2007) 'New game in Bangladesh'. Economic and Political Weekly, 42(10): 806–807.

Sobhan, Zafar (2008a) 'Back to square one in Bangladesh'. Economic and Political Weekly, 43(39): 8–9.

Sobhan, Zafar (2008b) 'Finishing line in sight in Bangladesh?'. Economic and Political Weekly, 43(47): 8–9.

Sobhan, Zafar (2009) 'State of shock'. Economic and Political Weekly, 44(11): 8–9.

Soguk, Nevzat (2010) Globalization and Islamism: Beyond fundamentalism. Lanham: Rowman and Littlefield Publishers.

Somek, Alexander (2005) 'Democratic minimalism: Turning the clock back from democracy to democratization'. University of Iowa Legal Studies Research Paper, 05–10: 36 pp.

Spencer, Jonathan (2007) Anthropology, politics and the state: Democracy and violence in South Asia (New Departures in Anthropology). Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Starr, Harvey (1991) 'Democratic dominoes: Diffusion approaches to the spread of democracy in the international system'. The Journal of Conflict Resolution, 35(2): 356–381.

Starr, Harvey and Lindborg, Christina (2003) 'Democratic dominoes revisited: The hazards of governmental transitions'. Journal of Conflict Resolutions, 47(4): 490–519.

'Statement of the National Democratic Institute (NDI)/The Carter Center pre-election delegation to Bangladesh's 2001 Parliamentary elections' (2001). National Democratic Institute/The Carter Center, (4 August). Atlanta: The Carter Center.

Stern, Robert W (2001) Democracy and dictatorship in South – Asia: Dominant classes and political outcomes in India, Pakistan, and Bangladesh. Westport: Praeger Publishers.

Stoker, Gerry (2006) Why politics matters: Making democracy work. New York: Palgrave, Macmillan.

Strindberg, Anders and Warn, Mats (2011) Islamism. Cambridge: Polity Press.

Sulkenen, Pekka (2007) 'Re-inventing the social contract'. Acta. Sociologica, 50(3): 325–333.

Suvin, Darko (2006) 'Terms of power, today: An essay in political epistemology'. Critical Quarterly, 48(3): 38–62.

Sztompa, Piotr (1999) Trust: A sociological theory. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Talisse, Robert B (2007) 'Folk epistemology and the justification of democracy'. Vanderbilt University Working Paper Series, (August).

Tamanaha, Brian Z (2005) On the rule of law: History, politics, theory. New York: Cambridge University Press.

Tamanaha, Brian Z (2006) A general jurisprudence of law and society. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Tamanaha, Brian Z (2009) 'Law'. In: Katz, Stanley N (ed.) The Oxford international encyclopedia of legal history. Oxford: Oxford University Press. Volume 4. pp.17– 23.

Tamanaha, Brian Z (2010a) Beyond the formalist–realist divide: the role of politics in judging. Princeton: Princeton University Press.

Tamanaha, Brian Z (2010b) 'A vision of social-legal change: Rescuing Ehrlich from Living Law'. Legal Studies Research Paper Series, Paper no. 10-10-05: (8 October). St. Louis: School of Law, Washington University in St. Louis.

Tamanaha, Brian Z. , Sage, Caroline , and Woolcock, Michael (eds.) (2012) Legal pluralism and development: Scholars and practitioners in dialogue. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Tannock, Charles (2014) 'Between secularism and shariah, Bangladesh's division widen'. The Daily Star (Lebanon), (11 February).

Tessler, Mark (2002) 'Islam and democracy in the Middle East: The impact of religious orientations on attitudes towards democracy in four Arab countries'. Comparative Politics, 34(3): 337–354.

Teubner, Gunther (1998) 'Legal irritants: Good faith in British law or how unifying law ends up in new divergences'. The Modern Law Review, 61(1): 11–32.

Thomas, P. (1997) 'Socio-legal studies: The case of disappearing fleas and bustards'. In: Phil Thomas (ed.) Socio-Legal Studies, 1–22. Dartmouth: Aldershot.

Tibi, Bassam (2012) Islamism and Islam. New Haven and London: Yale University Press.

Tocqueville, Alexis de (1969) Democracy in America. J.P. Mayer (ed.). Translated by George Lawrence. Garden City: Doubleday.

Torres, Jose Arsenio (1962) Asian Survey, 72(2): 79–105.

Transparency International Bangladesh (2006) Corruption perception index (CPI) 2006: Results, questions and answers, (6 November). Dhaka: Transparency International Bangladesh.

Transparency International Bangladesh Report (2014). The Independent (Bangladesh). Dhaka: Transparency International Bangladesh.

Tripathi, Salil (2014) The colonel who would not repent: The Bangladesh war and its unquiet legacy. New Delhi: Aleph Book Company.

Turner, John C (2005) 'Explaining the nature of power: A three-process theory'. European Journal of Social Psychology, 35: 1–22.

Twining, William (1973) Karl Llewellyn and the realist movement. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Twining, William (1974) 'Law and social science: the method of detail'. New Society, 27 June, pp. 758–761.

Twining, William (2000) Globalisation and legal theory. London: Butterworths.

Twining, William (2009) General jurisprudence: Understanding law from a global perspective. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Uddin, Sufia M (2006) Constructing Bangladesh: Religion, ethnicity and language in an Islamic Nation. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press.

'UN threatens Bangladesh's peacekeeping role'. (2007) The Daily Star, (12 January).

Upreti, B C and Gopal, K (eds.) (2012) Democracy in South Asia. New Delhi: Kalinga.

Uslaner, Eric M (2000) 'Trust, democracy and governance'. Prepared for the European Consortium for Political Research (ECPR) Workshop 13 on 'Voluntary associations, social capital and interest mediation: Forging the link'. Copenhagen: Denmark, p. 41.

Van Creveld, Martin (1999) The rise and decline of the state. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Van de Watering, Richard (2008) A. V. Dicey, Lectures on the relation between law and public opinion in England during the nineteenth century. Indianapolis: Liberty Fund.

Vanhanen, Tatu (2000) 'A new dataset for measuring democracy, 1810–1998'. Journal of Peace Research, 37(2): 251–265.

Vanhanen, Tatu (2004) 'Problems of democracy in ethnically divided South Asian countries'. Paper presented at The 18th European Conference on Modern South Asian Studies, Panel 32: Problems of Democracy in South Asia, (6–9 July). Lund: Sweden.

Vertovec, Steve and Peach, Ceri (1997) Islam in Europe: The politics of religion and community. Basingstoke: Macmillan.

Vigoda-Gadot, Eran and Mizrahi, Shlomo (2014) Managing democracies in turbulent times: Trust, performance, and governance in modern states. Heidelberg: Springer.

Vincent, Andrew (1987) Theories of the state. Oxford: Wiley-Blackwell.

Viroli, M (1992) From politics to reason of states: The acquisition and transformation of the language of politics, 1250–1600. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Vohra, N N (ed.) (2001) Culture, democracy and development in South Asia. New Delhi: Shipra Publications.

Von Tunzelmann, Alex (2007) Indian summer: The secret history of the end of an empire. New York: Henry Holt & Company.

Waldegrave, William and Selborne, Palmer (1913) The state and the citizen. London: Frederick Warne and Co.

Warren, Mark E (1993) 'Can participatory democracy produce better selves? Psychological dimension of Habermas's discursive model of democracy'. Political Psychology, Special Issue: Political Theory and Political Psychology, 14(2): 209–234.

Warren, Mark E (1999) Democracy & trust. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Watson, Alan (1993) Legal transplants: An approach to comparative law. Athens: University of Georgia Press.

Weinbaum, Marvin G (1996) 'Civic culture and democracy in Pakistan'. Asian Survey, 36(7): 639–654.

Weiner, Myron (1987) 'Empirical democratic theory'. In: Weiner, Myron and Ozbudun, Ergun (eds.) Competitive elections in developing countries. pp. 3–34. Durham: Duke University Press.

Wejnert, Barbara (2005) 'Diffusion, development, and democracy, 1800–1999'. American Sociological Review, 70(1): 53–81.

Welchman, Lynn (2002) 'Islamic law: Stuck with the state?' In: Huxley, Andrew (ed.) Religions, law and tradition. London: Routledge Curzon, 61–83.

West, Cornel (2004) Democracy matters. London: Penguin Books.

'Why pressurise Caretaker Govt?' (2001) The Bangladesh Observer, (26 July).

Wignaraja, Ponna and Hussain, Akmal (eds.) (1989) The challenge in South Asia: Development, democracy and regional corporation. New Delhi: SAGE Publications Pvt. Ltd.

Wilde, Alexander (1999) 'Irruptions of memory: Expressive politics in Chile's transition to democracy'. Journal of Latin American Studies, 31(2): 473–500.

Wollack, Kenneth (2005) 'Political competition as an anti-corruption tool'. Washington DC: Center for International Private Enterprise (21 June): 5 pp.

Wollheim, Richard (1958) 'Democracy'. Journal of the History of Ideas, 19(2): 225–242.

Wolpert, Stanley (1984) Jinnah of Pakistan. Oxford: Oxford University Press.

Wynbrandt, James (2009) A brief history of Pakistan. New York: Checkmark books.

Yeates, Nicola (2001) Globalization and social policy. London: Sage.

Yilmaz, Ihsan (2005) Muslim laws politics and society in modern nation states: Dynamic legal pluralisms in England, Turkey and Pakistan. London: Ashgate.

Yturbe, Corina (1997) 'On Norberto Bobbio's theory of democracy'. Political Theory, 25(3): 377–400.

Zafarullah, Habib Mohammad (1987) 'Public administration in the first decade of Bangladesh: Some observations on developments and trends'. Asian Survey, 27(4): 459–476.

Zahed, Iqthyer Uddin Md (May–June 2013) 'An analysis of US policy in the Liberation war of Bangladesh, 1971'. IIOSR Journal of Humanities and Social Science (IOSR JHSS) Volume 12, Issue 2, p.124 where the author refers to the work of Iqbal, M Z (2009), History of the Liberation War, Dhaka.

Zahur, A B M S (2008) 'End of line?' The Daily Star, (8 September).

Zakaria, Fareed (2004) The future of freedom: Liberal democracy at home and abroad. New York: W.W. Norton.

Zaman, Farhana (2012) 'Bangladeshi women's political empowerment in urban local governance'. South Asia Research, 32(2): 81–102.

Zamindar, Vazira Fazila-Yacoobali (2010) The long partition and the making of South Asia. Refugees, boundaries, histories. New York: Columbia University Press.

Ziring, Lawrence (1984) 'From Islamic Republic to Islamic state in Pakistan'. Asian Survey, 24(9): 931–946.

Ziring, Lawrence and LaPorte Jr., Robert (1974) 'The Pakistan bureaucracy: Two views'. Asian Survey, 14(12): 1086–1103.

Abdul Bari Sarker v Bangladesh 46 DLR (1994) AD 37.

Abdul Mannan Khan v Bangladesh ADC Vol. IX (A), 10 (2012). (The Constitution of Bangladesh [Thirteenth Amendment Act Case]).

Anwar Hossain Chowdhury v State BLD (1989) (Spl) 1.

Asma Jilani Case PLD (1972) SC 139 (Asma Jilani v Government of Punjab).

Bangladesh Italian Marble Ltd. and Others v Bangladesh BLT (2006) (HCD) 1, Special Issue. (The Constitution of Bangladesh [Fifth Amendment Act Case]).

BLAST (Bangladesh Legal Aid and Services Trust) v Bangladesh and Others (Fatwa Case), 63 DLR (HCD) 1.

Dosso's Case PLD (1968) SC 533.

Idrisur Rahman v Bangladesh (2008) 60 DLR 714.

Kesavanda Bharati v State of Kerala AIR (1973) SC 1461.

Mohinder Singh v Chief Election Commissioner AIR 1978 SC 85.

Rameshwar Prashad and Others (VI) v Union of India (2006) 2 SCC 1.

Secretary, Ministry of Finance v Masdar Hossain 20 BLD (2000) AD 141. (Separation of judiciary case).

Special Reference No. 1 of 2002 AIR 2003 Sc 87 or (2002) 8 SCC 237.